Capsule's Tilt Error Caused Overshoot

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter's Aurora 7 spacecraft overshot its intended target by 250 miles Thursday because it was about eight to 10 degrees off its planned attitude when the fervere rockets were fired to bring it out of orbit.

Instead of being tilted at a 34-degree angle to the horizon, it was inclined at between 24 and 28 degrees. As a result, the capsule followed a shallower re-entry angle and sped past its mark.

TRICKENDOUS SUCCESS

This was reported by Project Mercury operations director Walter Williams at a press conference following Carpenter's successful three-orbit flight.

Despite this and a number of other things that went wrong during the flight, U.S. space officials hailed the flight and Carpenter's performance as a tremendous success and another milestone toward the landing of an American on the moon in this decade.

CAREFUL PLANNING

D. Brainard Holmes of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, directing the manned U.S. lunar effort, said: "The flight today was a successful earth orbital mission due to careful planning of the Mercury team."

"We learned a great deal today," Holmes said, "and we will learn a lot more when we analyze the data. Early next year, we will attempt 18-orbit flights. Beyond that are the Gemini two-man flights and Apollo earth orbit and moon-landing missions."

Project Mercury director Robert Gilruth said it was not certain whether another three-orbit mission will be planned mid-June or John Glenn and Carpenter. He said five and seven-orbit flights are under consideration but added these might be skipped in favor of jumping to the 18-orbit flight, which will provide an entire day of data on a man in space.

ALWAYS LOST

Concerning the communications failure at the end of the flight, Williams said: "We always lose communications for several minutes during re-entry because the tremendous heat prevents radio signals from penetrating to the capsule. Usually we are able to resume communications fairly quickly but we aren't sure yet just what happened today. It is possible Carpenter was just out of range of telemetry and by the time a plane got within range, Scott already was out of the capsule and therefore out of voice communication."

Although the balloon which Carpenter trailed behind the capsule failed to detach when a signal was given, it caused no trouble and burned up early during re-entry. Gilruth said it provided valuable information on man's color and depth perception in space.

Mess Kit'll Bring Acquittal

DEVILS, England (AP) — A jury Thursday acquitted Capt. Nicholas Crepsigny Laurence Vivian, 26, of drunken driving. He said he was not tight-but his pants were.

The prosecution said Capt. Vivian, son and heir of Lord Vivian, fell while getting out of his light truck after leaving a party in sergeants' mess. "It is not easy to get in and out of a van in a mess kit," Capt. Vivian testified. "It (the uniform) has a high collar, tight trousers, and the spurs often catch."

TOKYO (UPI) — A U.S. Air Force C-134 Globemaster transport plane crashed into the side of a mountain 35 miles northwest of Tokyo last night, killing all seven persons aboard.

Hula Blaze Damages Upheld for B.C. Girl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The United States Court of Appeals Thursday upheld a $125,000 damage award to a British Columbia girl who suffered severe burns when a hula skirt purchased in Honolulu caught fire at a hometown party.

A Honolulu federal district court jury had awarded the damages to Carol Lee Chapman of Kamloops. The skirt was bought by her aunt, Mrs. Frances Loppard of New Westminster in Hawaii in 1958.

Thousands At Gates

HONG KONG (AP) — Thousands of refugees from Communist China again tried to slip past British border guards and barbed wire barriers into Hong Kong Thursday despite growing efforts of Communist authorities to dissuade them.

Communist loudspeakers appealed to the fugitives to return to their villages and help grow food. But, border reporters said Chinese guards made no attempt to use force to stop the refugee flow, which has become an international political and humanitarian problem.

Heavy rain Thursday broke Hong Kong's spring drought but brought a new worry to British security forces.

Officials said the rains could bring the threat of epidemic to the crowded Fanling transit camp, where the refugees are kept before being sent back over the border to Communist China.

MAKE BIG ROUNDUP

Border sources said British police and army patrols rounded up all but about 500 of 5,000 refugees who succeeded in getting into this overcrowded crown colony before dawn. They were sent to the detention camp for return to China.

In London, the foreign office said the Chinese Communists were reimposing border controls in the area by bringing in more frontier guards and clearing the region of the refugees sent back by the trainload. A spokesman gave no indication, however, of how effective such measures were proving.

Labor 'Crucified' Under Socreds

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (CP) — A Montreal labor leader charged Thursday that the Social Credit government of British Columbia "has crucified the labor movement to the point that employers are able to use the province's labor laws to smash unions almost at will."

St. Brainer, organization director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, told the union's convention that "some of the most vicious and - labor legislation ever placed on the statute books" faced workers in many parts of Canada.

"Elsewhere in Canada, governments may be less crude, but the attitude is still one of hostility," Brainer said. "Saskatchewan, where a Democratic socialist government is in office, is the one outstanding exception. And, in the last two years, there have been hopeful signs of an improved atmosphere in Quebec."

Heroin Carriers 'Merely Pawns'

CALGARY (CP) — A lawyer said in Supreme Court Thursday his clients, charged with illegal possession of heroin, were "pawns in a much larger game being played in Vancouver."

Webster MacDonald made the remark at the sentencing of Douglas Seignor, 40, to nine years, and Margaret Hall, 20, the woman.

Indians Demand Cash For Treaty Payments

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — Indians on three reservations near here, who were paid their annual treaty money by cheque this week, Thursday demanded future payments be made in cash. Residents of the Suncchild, O'Chiese and Big Horn reserves insisted on cash payment despite assurances from Indian affairs representatives, who said the government cheques were as good as gold, silver or paper money.

Ancient Craft Burns

Pat Bay Plane Crash Kills Highway Officials

Two senior officials of the B.C. highways department were killed when an ancient twin-engine Anson aircraft crashed and burned at Patricia Bay airport yesterday.

Dead are D. R. McLeod, 44, of 2154 Windsor, assistant deputy minister of highways, and the highways department's district engineer, A. F. Provenzano, 1962 Bouchier.

They apparently died instantly when the departmental plane stalled on take-off at Patricia Bay at 3:11 p.m. and plowed into the turf along side Runway 08.

Their aircraft, a reconditioned wartime Anson, exploded and burned on impact. The bodies of both men were taken from the flaming wreck.

age by navy firemen seconds after the crash.

"They never knew what hit them. They seemed to be hardly touched by the flames," said one of the seven-man crash crew.

The crash took place less than 100 yards directly in front of the department of transport control tower at the airport.

The plane, reported to be on a trip to inspect a highway construction project in the Esquimalt district, had completed its take-off run.

Wheels Still Down

Eyewitnesses say the wheels were still down when the plane appeared to go into a stall turn.

The plane, which had about 20 to 30 feet of altitude, lost flying speed and spun into the turf between Runway 08 and a taxi strip immediately in front of the control tower.

The crash was witnessed by two control tower personnel. They were identified as F. Adams and Keith Hamilton. A fireball burst from the crashed plane on impact.

One employee at the airport said the crash alarm was sounded even before the plane hit.

"Those fellows in the control tower must have been really on the ball," said the worker, driver of a fuel truck, who saw the plane dip one wing then go in ... and the alarm siren started at the same time.

A crash truck manned by three navy firemen was on the way to the scene even before the alarm sounded.

Standby Crash Truck

George Fieldhouse, 2640 Blanchard, Barney Kent, 2821 Cadboro Bay Road, and Harry Minchin, 62 Sturdee, were manning a standby crash truck at the navy hangar when they saw the crash.

"We hit the throttle and took off," related Mr. Fieldhouse. He was the first man to dash into the flaming wreckage to rescue the two occupants.

With his knife, he slashed through the safety belt of one of the two occupants and dragged the limp body out of the plane.

Meanwhile, three other crash trucks were manned and raced to the scene.

At the scene of the crash, while other members of the emergency crew laid a path of foam through the marring flames, Fieldhouse and Harry Minchin went back into the wreckage to bring out the second occupant.

Ironie Demonstration

"They did a marvelous job ... they seemed to be there within 60 seconds," said airport manager A. J. Knowland. Ironically, the navy crash team had put on a rescue display only last week for Navy Day visitors at the airport.

They had rescued a dummy from the "burning" wreckage of the same type of aircraft that figured in yesterday's tragic crash.

The firemen who went into the flames wore asbestos helmets and gloves, plus regulation firemen's boots and coats.

"We were too busy to feel the heat," said Mr. Fieldhouse. They had been standing by following the take-off of a T-33 jet. Another RCAF plane, a Viscount, was in the landing circuit when the Anson crashed.

The four-engine Viscount, carrying a pilot and a non-commissioned officer from Comox, was "waived off" by the tower.

No passenger flights were scheduled at the time, but a number of people in the passenger terminal saw the column of smoke and flame burst from the crashed plane.

Several workers from Fairway Aviation had just left their hangar when they heard the crash alarm siren and saw the smoke billowing from the far side of the field.

"It was amazing how fast those firemen got there ... it had just started when we could see the foam and CO2 start to cut into the fire," said one airframe worker.

The plane had taken off into

Moslems Slain Europeans Flee

ALGIERS (Reuters) — At least 32 persons, 28 of them Moslems, were killed Thursday in acts of violence in Algeria, military officials said here early today.

The report came after another day during which Europeans lined up by the hundreds to flee the continued terrorism in the North African territory.

The dead included five Moslem women. Seventeen persons, 10 of them Moslems, were wounded by terrorists Thursday. Among the wounded Moslems were two women and two children.

A total of 1,440 persons, mostly Europeans, left by air yesterday for France — the largest single exodus since the ceasefire agreement was signed in March. It took 16 planes to fly them to France.

Lightning Strikes Airman

ST. MURBERT, Que. (UPI) — Leading aeronauticsman A. Gingras, 21, of Montmagny, Que., was killed instantly when struck by lightning during a heavy thunderstorm at Air Defence Command headquarters here yesterday.

At the same time, a freak storm, described as a "miniature tornado" struck metropolitan Montreal, destroying buildings and injuring occupants.

Forest Blaze Hits Nova Scotia Shore

HALIFAX (CP) — Firefighters Thursday night battled a threatened, but still breezy, serious blaze on Nova Scotia's south shore.

Details of the fire were few, but lands and forests department officials said the fire was burning over more than 50 acres of mulwood near Woods Harbour, about 35 miles west of Shelburne.

No homes were immediately threatened, but stiff breezes were fanning the fire.

Crews of firefighters were working to keep the fire from reaching power lines.

Seven other fires were reported in the province during the day, but all were brought under control.

Charred skeleton of crashed aircraft lies surrounded by foam used to quell flames.

British Jets Join Thailand Defence

BANGKOK (Reuters)—A squadron of British supersonic Hawker Hunter jet fighters will begin arriving in Thailand today to support United States military forces here, it was announced Thursday.

A spokesman for the RAF base on Singapore said the first six of the rocket-equipped fighters and a Canberra jet bomber would leave for Bangkok in the morning.

The planes will provide weather information for the 5,000 U.S. troops already stationed in Thailand and the Thai forces themselves, the spokesman said.

ALLIES DUE

Military forces from two other members of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization are expected to land in Thailand within the next few days.

Australia is contributing a jet fighter squadron and New Zealand a small detachment of its special air services force. The total number of British planes involved has not been specified.

Several transport aircraft will follow the jet fighters and Canberra.

CALM BEFORE STORM

The announcement of the arrival of British, New Zealand and Australian forces came shortly after the Thai interior minister, Gen. Prapart Charuathien, said the situation in neighboring Laos is "the calm before the storm." There have been reports of Communist underground activity near the U.S. Marine camp 50 miles from the Laotian border.

HAVE LIVE AMMO

Lt. Gen. James Richardson, operation commander of the U.S. troops in Thailand, said members of the 27th Infantry Division at Korat, northern Thailand, now have been issued with live ammunition.

Richardson, commenting on reports that the 27th was equipped only with dummy bullets, said that when the troops arrived here last month they were on SEATO exercises with the Thai army which did not require live ammunition.

Severed Arm Restored But Boy Still in Danger

BOSTON (UPI)—A 12-year-old boy, who underwent a six-hour operation on a "one-in-a-million chance" of putting a severed arm back in place, was reported in critical condition yesterday.

Hospital authorities said Everett Knowles, Jr., was "doing as well as we hoped." His name remained on the danger list, however.

The boy's right arm was severed Wednesday when he was struck by a train. He was rushed to the hospital where the operation was performed immediately.

Doctors said if the surgery is successful it will be the first time to their knowledge that such a feat has been accomplished. A spokesman said it might take "up to 10 days" to determine the outcome.

Dr. Henry Edmunds reported following the operation there was a noticeable pulse in the boy's right wrist, indicating a good supply of blood was reaching the arm.

Salan Term Rocks Paris

PARIS (UPI)—The de Gaulle government, gravely disturbed by refusal of a Paris military tribunal to impose a death sentence on renegade General Raoul Salan, announced yesterday it plans drastic new measures against the secret terrorist army he commanded.

But it was clear President de Gaulle's prestige suffered a damaging blow when the high court refused to send his arch-enemy before a firing squad. Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe told a worried cabinet that the decision could have grave effects on the morale of French security forces fighting the Secret Army Organization Salan headed.

SPUR NEW WAVE

Officials in de Gaulle's office at the Elysee Palace privately expressed concern that Salan's escape from the death sentence would spur the Secret Army to a new wave of terrorist violence.

They also were worried deeply about repercussions on senior French army officers, who have been going through a severe test in Algeria.

The government's anxiety was shown in the announcement that it is preparing drastic new measures to crush terrorism. They will be disclosed later this week.

END TO DEATHS

The respected independent afternoon newspaper, Le Monde, recalling that no terrorists have been executed yet for their crimes, pointed out that clemency for the one-time titular head of the organization would make it impossible for any others to be sentenced to death in the future.

Furthermore, officials asked whether police and other security forces would be likely to risk their lives against the Secret Army, knowing that the terrorists were risking little on their side.

Dog Trapped 37 Days In Old Mine

IRON RIVER, Mich. (AP)—Lassie lived for 37 days trapped 100 feet underground in a cave-in area around the old Virgil Iron Mine near here.

Tuesday, long after her master, Edward Moskier, had given her up for dead, Lassie was spotted alive at the bottom of a pit.

Workmen lowered a basket on a pulley into the hole, baiting it with dog food and an old jacket Lassie used to sleep on at home. But Lassie could not be coaxed into the basket.

The workmen gave up. Later, Moskier checked the pit and saw the dog in the cage. He pulled Lassie home.

COVENTRY, England (CP)—The consecration today of Coventry's new cathedral in the presence of the Queen heals one of the last wounds of the Second World War.

Service Sunday In Port Renfrew

Two United Church services will be held in Port Renfrew district Sunday—at 11 a.m. in Port Renfrew Community Hall and at 2 p.m. in Harris Creek Community Hall. Speaker will be Anno de Raad. The regular weekly youth rally will be held Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Port Renfrew hall.

URBAN PORTION

Canada in 1961 had about 50 municipalities whose populations exceeded 25,000.

For 22 years this Midlands industrial city has been without a cathedral. The night of Nov. 14, 1940, German bombers dumped more than 500 tons of TNT on the city centre.

Key engineering industries around the city's suburbs were largely undamaged. But more than 50,000 houses were destroyed and the fine 15th-century Gothic cathedral was left a smoking shell, with only the spire intact.

Today a new cathedral, planned for more than 10 years and in construction for seven, will be sanctified by the Bishop of Coventry, Dr. Cuthbert Bardale.

The new cathedral is the masterpiece of architect Sir Basil Spence, who has always wanted to design a cathedral. "It's not perfect," he says, "but it's the best I could do."

Had to Kill Somebody Said Boys

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two teenagers who "had to kill somebody" were charged yesterday with the shotgun slaying of a 25-year-old stranger.

Police said the accused killers, Kevin Hennes, 16, and John Brennan, 15, admitted running down church organist George Butler simply because Butler fitted into an age pattern they had chosen.

"We had to kill somebody," police quoted Hennes. "We only kill people between the ages of 15 and 50."

"...and you keep your carburetor clean when you drive with Royalite gasoline"

"And is this important, this clean carburetor business?" you ask. Yes. Especially in city driving where there's a good deal of idling. Fumes from your own engine and from other cars—and dirt from the air around—tend to accumulate then. You notice it first in rough idling, finally in stalling.

"And does Royalite actually clean a carburetor?" It certainly does. A special detergent ingredient in all any existing grime away

Time for Action

WITH GRATIFYING speed the provincial government has taken action which will do much to prevent future sales of diseased meat to residents of the Greater Victoria area. However, it has given no indication that it will extend similar protection to other communities in British Columbia.

It is largely because of this and the very real fear that the provincial authorities might be inclined to wait for specific complaints before acting that has prompted the Victoria Chamber of Commerce to call upon the provincial government to set up "an effective system of governmental inspection of meat" to provide adequate safeguards throughout the province.

The main responsibility of preventing the sale of unfit meat to British Columbians rests squarely upon the provincial government.

The municipalities, of course, can pass bylaws to protect their own residents. But this on its own is not enough and could lead to a haphazard chopping up of the province into a confused checker-board of protected and unprotected areas.

The federal government, for its part, can only enforce its authority over meat produced for export and inter-provincial trade. What happens in the individual provinces is outside its jurisdiction.

Nevertheless in an effort to assist in tackling the problem of regulating the quality of meat for human consumption the federal government has offered to hold consultations with all provinces so that the subject could be attacked on all three levels of government—federal, provincial and municipal.

To date only two provinces—Manitoba and Ontario—have shown sufficient concern in the matter to accept the Dominion government's offer.

The time seems to have arrived for British Columbia to do the same.

Strictly at Odds

CAPTAIN DAVID GROSS, the former RCN officer now in politics as the Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, says that every sailor knows what the navy needs today. He should tell Mr. Paul Hellyer. The latter has been the chief opposition defence critic in Parliament, and presumably would be the defence minister in any Liberal government.

And what does he think the navy needs?

Speaking in Vancouver only two weeks ago he said "Canada should phase out of her anti-sub role," and went on to talk about air-lifted brigade groups with the naval role apparently limited to assault landing vehicles; destroyer escorts and frigates were no good, he said.

Captain Gross doesn't agree; either that or he is bent on soft-peddling the impact of Mr. Hellyer's declared beliefs and thus implied policies.

The Esquimalt-Saanich candidate says that the RCN "needs submarines and it needs some fast large anti-submarine surface ships."

The latter is precisely what the present government is continuing to supply, and in its latest program it is ordering three submarines and eight large-size frigates of modern design and power in order to maintain its assigned and primary allied role as an anti-submarine navy.

The disparity between the views of Captain Gross and Mr. Hellyer simply points up the confusing stands of the Liberal party on almost every question to the fore in the current election campaign.

Defence is no exception, for here are two divergent policies strictly at odds with one another.

The Tin Bird

FOR THE LAST decade, Victorians of aesthetic sensibility, the flag, and possibly the Canada goose have been insulted by the strange object that presides over the "new" post office.

True the metal monstrosity atop the flagpole of the federal building is no longer a topic of insignificant local conversation. But this is because residents don't normally walk or drive through the streets with their eyes lifted to the rooftops, and because one can't talk forever about a tin bird.

The fact remains that this ugly weathervane, believed by some theorists at the time of its installation to be a modernistic representation of a goose in flight, although that noble creature would flush like a flamingo if he knew it, has no business to be above the flag, in an eyecore on the skyline and must make visitors think us peculiar.

Would it be too much to hope that at this election season the government would consider taking it down?

Hockey Comeback

THE RETURN of professional ice hockey to Victoria, unexpected until the recent move by a group of local businessmen, appears to be in prospect. It depends now on the decision of the Western Hockey League at its annual meeting today and this is regarded as favorable.

Hockey supporters and the city in general will welcome the news, although it will be a further test of the popularity of large-scale spectator sports. These big in attendance in many centres nowadays, and it would seem that only a team able to challenge the best managers to draw crowds sufficient to keep a club in being.

The tie-up with Toronto Maple Leafs planned for the Victoria entry should help in this respect assuming that the Cougars are readmitted; the NHL club has given definite assurance of playing strength, a vital factor in the success of WHL teams.

Professional hockey is strictly business but its influence bolsters the amateur side of the game by setting standards for junior participants in this sport and thus encouraging the spread of athletic fitness. The more people in general play games the more beneficial to physical health and well-being.

Re-entry of Victoria into the WHL would be a stimulus to local sporting life in the winter months and it would also ally the city again with the principal cities of the coast on both sides of the line. In addition it would restore needed revenue to the Memorial Arena, which suffered when professional hockey ceased here.

Presumably there would be no need for undue concessions which would deprive the arena of legitimate returns; to keep afloat a professional hockey club must provide the playing attraction that will secure its solvency.

"In case you've ideas about carrying 'em off 'Ban-the-Bomb' style, wife's right behind you, Harry boy."

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes, and ships,
and sailing seas ...

BY TOM TAYLOR

WHILE a person keeps on breathing, no matter his ancient legs or vintage, he still has a stake in the world. But it was interesting to note in the news reports that young British thinks about "royalty, religion and the people who rule us."

As the Century 21 exposition makes evident, in a manner perhaps to frighten the stand-pats, the future is for the babes now in arms.

And young people were never an important segment of society as of now.

Thus the London newspaper poet that sings to prete the notion of Britain's youth and the VIFs they preferred best.

Not surprisingly, being British, they put the Queen at the head of the list; she is the person they'd like most to meet. They are not alone in their choice, I fancy. Most of the world's young, really shake her hand if the chance is offered; I wouldn't wonder either if in secret the anti-royalists would jump at the opportunity too, provided their public image wasn't disturbed.

Prince Philip was second to the Queen in this phase of the poll, and Elvira Presley third. The latter is surely indicative of something or other—perhaps religion since no direct reference to this subject is contained in the news dispatch. Personally I had thought Elvira was something of a demigoddess and had abdicated, or been forced off his throne by inter-pop singers. It certainly made a queer sandwich to find him betwixt Philip and Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

Young people in truth have a wide awareness of things nowadays. I would never myself have included a crown and a philosopher-physician in the same context.

I doubt it was correct matrimonial protocol, though, to differentiate between wife and husband, although this would be the fault of the poll that asked the question, but it seems a little odd to find Prince Philip selected as the most popular member of the royal family with the Queen following him. And that if forced to choose between them the royal consort and yet the sovereign would win youth's accolade.

Why then would they want most to meet her and not him?

Philip is also considered the most amusing of the blood royal, which is a pretty fair appraisal albeit even young people, assuming they can make head of philosophers, shouldn't expect a queen to be amusing. She has more to do than be an entertainer.

What they have in mind, I suppose, is that Philip's role gives him more scope and undoubtedly he is the liveliest of the palace circle. Lord Snowdon is away down the list in this respect but give the lad time. He hasn't been on the job so long.

But if the future is in young people's hands, as suggested earlier, then it appears the British monarchy is safe; at least in Britain. Four out of every five polled would rather have a queen than a president.

And too the majority of the young generation like the Queen's voice and accent. This should be warning to Lord Altrincham. He is still in his thirties but obviously the youngsters coming up behind him think he is out of tune with the times.

They seem to find the royal message favorable enough.

The European Common Market

New Zealand Feels Menaced

By MARJORIE HACKETT

NEW ZEALAND that "furthest-flung outpost of the British Empire," which at the moment feels that it is in danger of being flung even further away, is both like and unlike its parent country.

It is a green, island country where it rains a lot, its people are mainly of English, Scottish and Irish descent, the language is English and among inherited traditions are garden parties and bannocks for worthy every official occasion, English cooking, a firm belief in the innate decency of Englishmen and in the superiority of all things English.

But there are differences. This other-England has been planted in a sub-tropical zone where the plentiful sunshine has caused a certain thawing-out process; where Christmas comes in summer and where Easter is marked by the falling of autumn leaves. It is far from European contacts, surrounded by a narrow stretch of practically empty waters.

The land itself is not like England and resemblances are man-made, often by homesick colonists. An English visitor seeing stretches of grassland, bordered by salt trees, and a few older schools and churches built in the English style, might well think that "this is just like home," but not when he gazes at a snow-clad mountain peak with a fern-filled forest growing right up to the snowline, or when he sees thermal activity in an area where many Maori live, or even when he sees the hillsides, still bearing the stumps of burned-off forest, covered in thousands of sheep.

The people themselves have changed. Class distinctions by birth seem gone away to a new class distinction based on ability, and initiative and independence have become marked characteristics. (Even today New Zealand is one of the few countries where tipping is not a necessity—"Forgotten some of your change, mate?")

English professors and teachers tried to keep the English accent pure in a race which was rapidly becoming tough enough to produce some of the world's best sprinters—and they failed. But the essentials of the English tradition persisted.

Isolated in the vastness of the southwest Pacific with her nearest neighbor, Australia, in much the same state of development as herself, New Zealand threw her lifeline to England and the continent, economic and cultural ties remained so close that a long succession of New Zealand statesmen, in peace and war, repeated the cliché "Where England goes we go."

In recent years, New Zealand has supplied a good life for all without too much struggle. A social security of the dip in 1960's exports.

But that secret army had an enemy, deadly, armed, alert and merciless. What arms do the victims of the Secret Army Organization in Algeria have?

It is beyond question that that organization will go down in history as one of the shabbiest in all the records of unmanly men. And the pity is that this organization is being formed at the very moment that France needs the good opinion of the world more than she ever has in centuries of gloom.

And poets and novelists are commencing to employ the New Zealand idiom with out any self-consciousness and there is one novelist at least who promises to take his place among the few good novelists of the century.

But the placid contentment of New Zealanders, some might even call it complacency, is due to be shaken. All the necessities, the comforts, the whole way of life is financed by the land. It is a country of self-sufficiency. There are 25 sheep to every man, woman and child and the country "rides on the sheep's back."

The wool and frozen lamb, closely followed by butter (the golden butter which at first was not pale enough for the English housewife until some inspired advertiser hit on the phrase "captured sunshine") earn most of the country's income.

One of the strange ideas that many foreigners have about New Zealand is that vodka and caviare are so to its inhabitants what beer and beef are to the British.

Vodka is still undoubtedly the Russians' favorite strong drink in spite of its being under something of an official cloud. Its price has been sharply increased (foreign residents in Moscow find it cheaper to import their Russian vodka from Copenhagen or Helsinki than to buy it here), and theoretically there is a personal limit of 100 grams, or two small glasses, on vodka consumption in restaurants.

It is quite possible to stay in the Soviet Union for two or three months and still think that there is plenty of caviare. The sort of hotel a foreigner stays in and the sort of restaurant he eats in can usually provide him with caviare every day of the week. By comparison with the price overseas it is cheap.

Apart from the good restaurants, however, caviare, black or red, is hard to come by, even in the comparatively well-stocked Moscow food stores. I tried to buy some caviare in the capital's best food shop, Gastronom No. 1.

This shop is still sometimes called by the name of its former owner, Eliseyevsky. But for all its old-fashioned charm and its high-quality food, Eliseyevsky's could not let me have any caviare of any kind.

The explanation seems to be that caviare is an important foreign currency earner. The latest export figures are 182 tons in 1958, 234 tons in 1959 and 198 tons in 1960. In spite of the dip in 1960's exports.

Another favorite Russian sea food, the Kamchatka crab, is also being bred in the Atlantic, away from its original home on the Pacific coast.

The net result of these plans will certainly mean a lot more caviare on the world market, though obviously the Soviet government will not encourage any consequent fall in prices.

In the long run the Russian shopper may benefit too, but it is likely to be a rather long run. In the meantime he might be lucky enough, when he is near the Volga, to buy caviare from a poached sturgeon below the market price of about $30 a kilo. Otherwise he can always make do with "Katzikowsky's" caviare. Students often eat this spread on bread for breakfast. It is made of all things, from a sort of vegetable marrow.

ing and poets and novelists are commencing to employ the New Zealand idiom with out any self-consciousness and there is one novelist at least who promises to take his place among the few good novelists of the century.

But the placid contentment of New Zealanders, some might even call it complacency, is due to be shaken. All the necessities, the comforts, the whole way of life is financed by the land. It is a country of self-sufficiency. There are 25 sheep to every man, woman and child and the country "rides on the sheep's back."

The wool and frozen lamb, closely followed by butter (the golden butter which at first was not pale enough for the English housewife until some inspired advertiser hit on the phrase "captured sunshine") earn most of the country's income.

One of the strange ideas that many foreigners have about New Zealand is that vodka and caviare are so to its inhabitants what beer and beef are to the British.

Vodka is still undoubtedly the Russians' favorite strong drink in spite of its being under something of an official cloud. Its price has been sharply increased (foreign residents in Moscow find it cheaper to import their Russian vodka from Copenhagen or Helsinki than to buy it here), and theoretically there is a personal limit of 100 grams, or two small glasses, on vodka consumption in restaurants.

Among measures to redress this damage are plans to complete 13 sturgeon-breeding factories by 1965.

The plans for increasing red caviare production are even more dramatic.

Ten years ago the salmon was mainly caught in the Pacific off the coast of Alaska. A variety of causes, including Japanese fishing fleets, led a few years ago to a "salmon airlift" from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Fifty million salmon eggs were flown from Vladivostok to Marmouth, a port on the Barents Sea coast. By 1960 the products of these eggs were being sold in the Atlantic fisheries.

Abreast Of Past

By CASSANDRA
from London

THE Greek, prophetic Cassandra, daughter of Priam and Hecuba, who had the gift of prophecy coupled with the curse that no one would believe her, has in this year of diaphanous the following things named after her: a laundry, a hairdresser's, a Pullman car, a Paris perfume and a columnist.

I had always assumed that I was the only journalist to carry this sacred pseudonym.

But not so.

I have before me a copy of The Morning Chronicle and London Advertiser.

It is dated Friday, July 2, 1788—the year in which the French revolution began.

On page 2, column 4, there is a column headed: "POLITICAL SPECULATIONS."

The author? One who signs himself "Cassandra."

Excerpt: "Whenever it happens unless Russian assists England, the Americans will intercept the trade of England to the Baltic, because the sea between America and the Baltic being open, they can advance, lie to, or secure as they please, and sailing with the westerly winds which prevail in high latitudes to the North, they can sweep the trade of England in the Baltic."

What O, the shipping dispute now raging between London and Washington?

Cassandra in The Morning Chronicle of 173 years ago goes on:

"It is natural to conclude from experience, that Spain, France and perhaps Holland, all of whom they think have an interest separate from England, will show to her in her hour of distress, the mercy and generosity they evinced in the late war with America."

"Russia, however, if she is well treated, will assist Old England."

Note the theme. A Common Market sympathy between England, Spain, France and Holland and a conciliatory attitude towards Russia—exactly as is now being pursued by London and Washington at this very moment towards the Russians over the Berlin problem.

Why, O why, do I try to write this column? To keep abreast of past times, I suppose.

The fascination of Field Marshal Romsdel never fades for the British.

He was "The Desert Fox," the gallant enemy, the worthy opponent, the German Manly.

Yet again, his name crops up and the voice of adulation is heard once more.

This time it is Sir Eugen Millington-Drake, former diplomatist with great international experience in the British Foreign Office.

He has presented his "Rommel Shooting Prize" to the German army, to commemorate the memory of the Nazi general and "his sterling qualities as a leader. He was a man without blemish and with nothing against him."

The picture is not so simple as that. Romsdel was a favorite of Hitler and one of the main exponents of armored warfare. He rebuilt the panzer divisions and his professional skill was seen when the Nazis burst into Poland, into Belgium, Holland and France and, above all, in North Africa.

This was the shining sword that made possible the death of 10,000,000 Jews.

When things went wrong, Romsdel was implicated in the plot to kill Hitler. The ally, or the accomplice, changed sides.

I doubt whether he ever visited a concentration camp but on many occasions he was, who knew the Nazi leaders intimately for many years, could have been unaware of the massive evil that was going on.

Sir Eugen Millington-Drake must be short of valiant heroes.

For Americans—and others—who delight in the English medieval theme, there is a fine notice now on display in that lovely old Thames-side town of Wallingford.

It is headed: "IN THE MATTER OF THE CHARITY OF WILLIAM LAUD ARCH-BISHOP OF CANTERBURY" —and goes on:

"Notice is given that grants to assist poor girls with the expense of marriage will be made by the trustees of the above charity at a meeting to be held in the Town Hall, Wallingford, on Tuesday, June 12."

The grants are open to poor girls aged 15 years or more, born in the borough of Wallingford of honest parents who (a) have for three years together at least served one master or mistress, or (b) if there are none, to have followed some lawful employment.

Archbishop Laud born in 1572, was a zealous royalist for King Charles and was executed at the tower for high treason in 1645.

HAS anybody told the Secret Army Organization in Algeria that their performance is shabby against cowardice? What sort of decayed Frenchmen are these who creep and crawl, a sort of low grade Ku Klux Klan, slaughtering innocent random by-standers, including children?

The whole world realizes that France went through a period of withering humiliations in 1940 and that a great measure of recuperation of national pride was afforded by the secret French underground in the latter years of the war.

But that secret army had an enemy, deadly, armed, alert and merciless. What arms do the victims of the Secret Army Organization in Algeria have?

It is beyond question that that organization will go down in history as one of the shabbiest in all the records of unmanly men. And the pity is that this organization is being formed at the very moment that France needs the good opinion of the world more than she ever has in centuries of gloom.

'Missing' Hero Turned Up on Raft

Radio Blackout. Overshoot Gave World the Shivers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—U.S. astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter Thursday became the second U.S. man to circle the earth, making a three-orbit trip that ended with almost an hour's frightening uncertainty about his safe return.

He was plucked from the sea by a jet helicopter after landing 250 miles beyond his target area.

For a fearful 35 minutes he was out of radio contact with his country and the rest of the world. Voices of reporters broadcasting the adventure into space shook with uncertainty. It appeared the space operation might be on the verge of disaster.

FANNED OUT

Ships and planes fanned out over the Atlantic in search of the navy lieutenant-commander and his space capsule, a mere speck in the vast expanse of water. He was soon found serene and well on a life raft, his Aurora 7 space ship floating nearby.

As for Carpenter's capsule, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it was picked up from the water by the destroyer Pierce and was being taken to Puerto Rico. From there it was to be flown back to Cape Canaveral. There was no immediate word of its condition, officials said.

Subsequently, in a telephone conversation with President Kennedy from the aircraft carrier Intrepid, Carpenter said "my apologies for not having aimed a little bit better on re-entry."

LIFE RAFT

His rescue from a rubber life raft floating in a calm sea 1,200 miles southeast of here came shortly after 4:30 p.m. EDT. At that time he had been gone from Cape Canaveral for seven hours and 45 minutes.

He apparently had been floating on his rubber life raft since he landed about 1:41 p.m.

PRESS CONFERENCE

Carpenter headed for the Intrepid and then to Grand Turk Island for a medical examination and a flight report. He is scheduled to come back here Sunday for welcoming ceremonies and a press conference.

FEARED CAPSULE LOST

For 35 minutes there were fears that Carpenter and his Aurora 7 spacecraft had been lost. Then came the good news shortly after 2:30 p.m. that a navy patrol bomber had sighted the astronaut on a life raft.

The coast guard at the Virgin Islands said he came down off Anegada Island, 19 degrees and 29 minutes north latitude and 64 degrees and 1/2 minute west longitude.

PARA-MEDICS

A Navy Neptune patrol bomber parachuted three paramedics—naval medical technicians—into the water soon after Carpenter was sighted. They had with them a tube-like rubber collar to affix to the Aurora 7 to keep it from sinking.

Two jet helicopters from the Intrepid hurried to the scene to hoist Carpenter and the three parachutists to safety.

Radio contact with the Aurora 7 was lost a few minutes after it re-entered from orbital flight about 1:35 p.m.

Carpenter left earth atop a flaming 360,000-pound-thrust Atlas missile at 8:45 a.m. (EDT).

Though Carpenter was calm throughout, he was not cool. At one point the temperature inside his aluminum space suit climbed to 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

SHORT FUEL

Midway through his second orbit, it appeared that a shortage of fuel for his in-flight controls might develop and force him down before the end of the planned three orbits.

Despite these difficulties, all correctable, the voyage was termed a scientific success, comparable to that of Masine Lt.-Col. John H. Glenn Jr., on Feb. 20.

Astronaut Alan Shepard — "We're awfully happy he landed where he did. It could have been a lot worse. Considering everything, it wasn't too far away to land."

Garden Notes

Blooming Compact

M. V. CHESNUT, ERIES

In selecting annual flowers for bedding-out purposes, the big problem is to find kinds which will start blooming very soon after the plants are purchased and set out, and which will continue to bloom with a non-stop performance right through until bulb-planting time in the fall.

Almost any of our summer-flowering annuals can be counted on to make a good splash of color for two or three weeks, but subjects which will bloom without a let up all season long are few and far between.

The best and most versatile of the lot, to my mind, is the petunia, and particularly the little fellows of the nana compacta group—the dwarf bedding petunias. These have all the virtues we look for in a bedding plant—they make neat and compact plants, they come into bloom early, they never stop blooming, and the range of colors is so wide that you can work out almost any color scheme you please.

Bugs don't seem to bother them much, nor are they the least bit fussy as to soil type or aspect.

The great-granddaddy of the dwarf bedding petunias is Rosy Morn, a rose pink flower which made its bow to the gardening world over 20 years ago.

Since that time, the plant breeders have developed an ever-increasing number of low-growing, compact varieties in almost every color of the rainbow—even yellow—which bloom their heads off all summer long, covering themselves with so many of their smallish flowers that you can hardly see any foliage.

Some good ones in this nana compacta group are Snowball, satiny white; Cream Star, star-shaped cream-colored flowers with a yellow throat; Flaming Velvet, wine purple; Peach Red, deep salmon suffused with light red; Fire Chief, still the reddest of all petunias, Bluebird, clear violet-blue flowers with a velvety texture, and Crusader, bearing a red Maltese cross on a white background.

Several years ago I planted up a long, narrow bed bordering our driveway with a dwarf bedding petunia called Glitters, with red and white candy-striped flowers. These put on a terrific show, stopping all passers-by, until I inadvertently squirted them with weedkiller instead of bug-killer. Even then, although obviously suffering from the great-grandfather of all hangovers, they put up a gallant attempt to continue the floral display.

While Glitters was colorful and eye-catching, there was far too much variation in the flowers. Some were almost pure pink, some all white, and only about half had the desired candy-striped effect. I think Crusader, a first-generation hybrid, has probably been developed to correct this fault and take its place.

Bedding petunias can get along with remarkably little care. They don't need more than a smidgin of water and no fertilizer at all in reasonably fertile soil—in fact, they seem to bloom more profusely if they aren't fed.

They can get along, at a pinch, without the routine removal of the faded flowers, although the display is quite a bit brighter when this chore is attended to regularly. Incidentally, this is a most unpleasant task, as your hands get all gummed up with a sticky deposit exuded by the stems.

Several years ago I found out the hard way—that the petunia is allergic to that wonder bug-killer, malathion. The plants seem to sicken and droop when sprayed with an insecticide containing this ingredient, so if the aphid attack your petunias, use nicotine or derris.

More Dreams of Glory

PARIS — We always seem to have dreams of glory in the form of exclusive interviews with world figures. First we interviewed Khrushchev in our dreams, then de Gaulle, and the other night we closed our eyes and saw President Kennedy. He was sitting in his rocking chair in his office.

The President spoke first: "I'm very glad you could come to Washington. Although I respect the Washington press corps, there are certain matters I prefer to discuss with somebody like yourself with whom I can speak more frankly."

Mr. B.: Thank you, Mr. President. I always believed that one must ask himself not what he can do for his country, but what his country can do for him.

President Kennedy: That's well said.

Mr. B.: You've been criticized because a large proportion of your family is in politics. How do you feel about this criticism?

President Kennedy: It's a just one, but I don't have any choice. How can I get rid of them? The other day I casually mentioned to Bobby that maybe he should resign, and two FBI men woke up Caroline at three o'clock in the morning.

Mr. B.: Also, the Republicans are very upset about the way you handled the steel business.

President Kennedy: My father once said to me all steel men are "%%& blanks."

Mr. B.: I'm sorry. I didn't get that. President Kennedy I said my father once told me all steel men are "%%& blanks."

Mr. B.: And do you agree with this in the light of recent events?

President Kennedy: I don't agree with all of it. I would say they are %%& blanks and let it go at that.

Of course, there are exceptions.

Mr. B.: What is your feeling in regard to steel prices?

Mr. Kennedy: I have no special thoughts on the matter. I don't expect the steel people to tell me how to run my business and they don't expect me to tell them how to run theirs.

Mr. B.: One of the criticisms we've heard is that you're very sensitive to what is written about you in the press. Would you like to comment on this?

President Kennedy: This is not necessarily true. Occasionally someone writes something that I don't agree with and naturally I get angry, as any president of the United States would. But I believe the New Frontier is always open to criticism, and we welcome criticism, providing it is fair, just, and not aimed at us.

Mr. B.: How do you feel about the international situation at the moment?

President Kennedy: I think, except for Cuba, Laos, Indochina, Berlin, NATO, the Common Market, China, Latin America, and, just recently, France, we have nothing to worry about.

Mr. B.: Do you feel our allies are doing their share to protect the free world?

President Kennedy: I think the NATO alliance has never been stronger, particularly where Denmark and Iceland are concerned.

Mr. B.: But what about your differences with Chancellor Adenauer over Berlin?

President Kennedy: We have no differences. The fact that I ordered Bobby to check Adenauer's last income-tax return is pure coincidence.

Lady from Spain Hits Trail

LONDON (NANA)—Ava Gardner is coming out of hibernation in Spain, to make a movie—35 Days in Peking. She has told producer Sean Browne that if the script is right she will be happy to co-star with Charlton Heston in this story of the Boxer rebellion for the modest sum of $500,000. Ava's last three films were flops, but she is still a star and moviemakers would be glad to have her services any time. Ava's apartment in Madrid is glorious—a huge penthouse furnished with priceless antiques. Argentine ex-dictator Juan Peron lives in the same elegant building.

Henry Fonda, beaming over son Peter's recent Daniel Blum Award for being a promising actor, told me, "Now that my play has closed, I'm trying to decide between three films—one to be made in New York, one in Hollywood, and another probably in New York." If the time can be arranged, Henry might do all three.

Jane Morgan swallowed a nail a few weeks ago. She can't remember how or when. The singer complained of tummy ache, X-rays were taken, and there was the nail nestling uncomfortably in her interior. She's hoping an operation won't be necessary.

Hope Lange, playing a very rich girl in Glenn Ford's The Grand Duke and Mr. Pimm, lives in quite a fantastic house in the movie. Her villa features the entire front of the Hotel Du Cap with its swimming pool and tennis courts. The hallway on the first floor is really the casino at Beaulieu. The back of her house is the rear of the Monte Carlo casino. And her bedroom, in a huge villa at Cap Martin, overlooks Monte Carlo harbor. I'm surprised they overlooked using Princess Grace's huge palace in her tiny principality. Ford told me his house should be very attractive, with Jack Cassidy (Shirley Jones's husband) doing the decorating, and recently divorced George Montgomery making the furniture.

Ruth McDevitt, in the movie with Glenn and Hope, told me she started her acting career at 45 with a week in a Florida theatre, and in addition to The Grand Duke appeared in The Parent Trap and Boys' Night Out with Kim Novak.

The Dino De Laurentiis production, The Stranger, has finally been approved by the widow of Albert Camus and will soon be filming with director Luchino Visconti, one of the top men in the new realistic European school of moviemaking.

Anna Magnani will be filming I Love You for Rossellini, 15 years after she made Love for the same director and fell in love with him too. Love was a 30-minute short, with Anna in her bedroom with a telephone, waiting for her lover to call. I Love You will be made in Greece in the fall. And with Roberto being so free and all, cupid is standing by for developments.

Secret Time Top Issue In 'Ideal Pilot' Flights

Victoria Flying Club will stage a novel competition this weekend, which is designed to find the club's "ideal pilot."

Operation "Secret Time Flight"—the brainchild of W.J. Langwith, the club's flight chairman—will be carried out Saturday and Sunday.

Twelve flights of the two-seater Fleet Canuck aircraft, operated by the club will be made starting at 9 a.m. Saturday. The pilots on each flight will fly from Victoria to Nanaimo, then to Abbotsford and back to Victoria.

They will match their time against a pre-set time schedule which was worked out prior to the competition and is now in a sealed envelope in the club's safe.

The secret schedule sets out the time the ideal pilot would take to make the trip.

The envelope will be opened by club president A. M. Davidson at 8 p.m. Sunday, at the completion of the last flight. Trophies will go to the two pilots making the run closest to the time set out in the envelope.

OVERSTORED

Woodward Stores reports an increase of 10 per cent in its net profits in the first quarter of 1962 from a year ago, while sales were up four per cent. C. N. Woodward, president, said however the return on the sales dollar was still unsatisfactory and blamed the "overstore" position of Alberta and British Columbia and intense price competition for the profit squeeze of last year.

times through the centennial celebrations, will begin today.

Mayor R. B. Wilson was charged with the formation of the Hundred at a special meeting of city council yesterday by Edward McFayden portraying Victoria's first mayor, Thomas Harris.

As a beginning, "Mayor Harris" presented Mayor Wilson and aldermen with official centennial hats, ties and booster buttons.

The men were given grey felt toppers, black string ties and Ald. Lily Wilson was given a straw boater and had a string tie pinned to her lapel.

Aldermen swapped toppers until they found hats which fitted them. Ald. A. W. Toome ended up with a too-large hat and Ald. J. L. W. McLean's was too small.

"Mayor Harris" called on Victoria citizens to "get behind the centennial, put their shoulders to the wheel, stop all pettiness so we can have the finest centennial in the world."

"I charge you, the council, to get out and push this centennial. From this day hence forth Victoria shall be in a holiday spirit."

Mayor Wilson will today ask Victoria Centennial Society to help him find "The Mayor's Hundred."

U.K. to Buy Uranium But at Lower Price

OTTAWA (CP)—Britain has agreed to buy the entire 12,000 tons of uranium it signified that it was prepared to take from Canada under a 1957 letter of intent, a government source said yesterday.

However, in agreeing to live up to this commitment on quantity, Britain has been granted two concessions by Canada—a lower price and a longer delivery period.

The source said a contract will be signed shortly by Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, the federal uranium agency, and the British Atomic Energy Authority.

The price is expected to be between $3 and $3.25 a pound—or a total of about $129,000,000—and delivery dates will be stretched beyond the end of 1966. Former price was $8 a pound.

Mother Guilty In Five Deaths

KAMLOOPS (CP)—The mother of five children burned to death in a fire Jan. 8 was found guilty Thursday on five counts.

Mrs. Virginia Mary. Bowie was remanded until May 31 for sentencing after being convicted on each of five counts of unlawfully exposing a child under 10 years of age whereby his life was endangered.

Mrs. Bowie was visiting friends when flames exploded through the one-storey frame structure at the little community of Barriere, 45 miles north of here.

Killed were Robert, 5; Gilbert, 4; John, 3; Stanley, 18 months; and Harvey, five months.

Mrs. Bowie was originally charged with abandoning the children, but the Crown changed the charge.

At the time of the blaze, neighbors said they had seen the flames but made no rescue

Refill for Royal Jug

MONTREAL (UPI)—Two 10-gallon crates of pure Quebec maple syrup left for Britain yesterday on the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaver Cove, a gift from the City of Westmount to Queen Elizabeth.

Westmount, an Anglo-Saxon stronghold surrounded by the city of Montreal, presented the Queen with a maple syrup jug during the 1959 royal visit to Canada. Each year since the city has dispatched "refill" supplies to Buckingham Palace.

Guiding Authority Urged for Colleges

VANCOUVER (CP)—A provincial authority to chart the course of higher education in British Columbia and to allocate funds was urged Thursday by Mrs. Phyllis Ross, newly-installed chancellor of the University of B.C.

Without such an authority, she said, "there might easily evolve a situation where one university or college within the province would be in competition with others for its share of the monies available."

Boxla Deck Looks Stacked As Royals Roll Merrily On

VIEWS of SPORT

Belinsky swaggered toward the dugout with a small, contemptuous smile that was meant to infuriate the rooters. It did. They brayed into his sassy face. They jeered through megaphones, calling him names. Whole clouds of white handkerchiefs fluttered in derision. The Angels lost and it was the rookie's first defeat after five straight victories, including

Winters of Discontent

He was christened Robert in December, 1936, was called Bob, but preferred Bo because it's shorter. During the Second World War his father, who had a factory job in Trenton and moved his family from the Bronx. Bo played ball in recreational leagues, but not in high school, where he preferred pool. He grew up tall and good-looking in a dark and hungry way. He is a sharp dresser, proud of the mohair and cashmere threads he picked up cheap in Venezuela.

Rex Brown signed him for the Pittsburgh organization, but the Pirates were cool about it when the Orioles took him from Pensacola, where Baltimore had a limited working agreement. Neither Baltimore, the city, nor the Orioles, the team, impressed him.

"I'm a nice guy," he said, "until I get shoved around. The fall of 1958 I'd struck out a lot of guys in Class C and they brought Steve Dalkowski and I up here to work out with the Orioles. There was just one little room in the hotel with one little bed. I called the assistant farm manager and asked him

"You say you were lousy in training camp," a fellow said "how did you feel starting the Angels' second game of the season?"

"A little shaky at the start. I was one putout away from going to the bullpen, to stay there until I proved myself. That's one thing burns me up. Wherever you go, they tell you you have to prove yourself all over again. Well, I think I can pitch in the big league, but not for any ten years."

"If you hadn't made it this year," he was asked, "what would you do?"

"Cut my wrists. I guess. No, I had it figured. The Angels would send me to Hawaii, probably, and that would be fun."

Salmon have arrived at Port Renfrew... sea-run cut-throat trout fishing has been hot in West Bay and the Gorge... Saanich Inlet fish are averaging two blues or jack-springs to a boat... Forster Pass has been the island's hot test spot for blackbacking... All lakes are producing trout, but none are reported hot.

These are the highlights of the fishing scene... Jim Palmer has been having plenty of luck fishing the sea-run in West Bay, at the foot of Esquimalt's Head Street, and has been getting them in the one-to-two-pound bracket on a No. 1 McKnight spoon. Others have been getting them with gang trolls, and marine operator Jimmy Worwick has been catching them on small spoons right off his wharf.

Best times are on the incoming tides. These sea-run will be accepted in the Colonist King Fisherman contest as river trout.

One hot spot in the Gorge is below the Tillicum Bridge and another is in the Craigflower bridge area. Deadly Dicks, small Crocodiles and silver-bodied Blues are good bets. There are plenty of the cutthroats in the Gorge, but there is also plenty of feed, which makes them hard to catch.

Another good cutthroat spot is in the Inner Harbor, off Fisherman's Wharf.

Almost anything can be expected to come out of Saanich Inlet now, and from any depth, but mostly they are getting three-to-four-pound blues and jackprings, with the odd big spring, mostly six to 15-pounds, among them.

John Neff landed a 28-pounder Wednesday at 7 a.m., off the Stone House, on a Lucky Louie plug to take the lead for the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Angler's Association monthly trophy. Arthur Rutherford took a 25-pounder Sunday off Chesterfield Rock and W. Shelds got a 21.2 pounder in Mistry Bay on Sunday on Minnow Tanager.

The triangle between Goldstream Island, Chesterfield Rock and Mistry Bay has been productive spot and further up the Inlet, from the Brentwood end to the Boulder to McKenna Bay and from Bamberston to the Deep Hole have been productive.

Blackbacks and coho grills are reported plentiful off Oak Bay and the Victoria waterfront. But effort has been light. Only the odd big spring is being taken.

Portler Pass and the eastern shores of Valdes and Gabriola Islands have been the best spots for blues and coho grills, with an average of three to a boat, but wind has made it difficult to fish on some days.

Snags Island to Nanosee has been providing fair blue-back fishing on backfalls and hootchie kootchie and fair numbers of blackbacks are still in the waters from Northfield Bay to French Creek, but bumpy weather has resulted in light catches.

The bluebacks are now off Qualicum, and this is the weekend to try and pick up that early coho crest off Qualicum Bay and Deep Bay. Although our reports indicate that far more dogfish than salmon were in these waters at the weekend.

On Wednesday, fishing-barber Henry Rollin and partner limited with 16 coho grills at Clayton's.

High interest continues in freshwater fishing, especially in lakes, but warmer weather is still needed to bring on the hot fishing.

Harris Creek and San Juan rivers are too low for good fishing. In the Kootenah some anglers are taking mended kelt. Chamaeleon river is low, but any rain should see more good smoltheaded there. On Salt Spring Island, trout up to five pounds are being taken from Weston Lake and bass are coming on in St. Mary Lake.

Cowichan Lake is steadily improving and is best bet for big lake trout. Fourth Nanaimo Lake is producing a few nice catches. Summer run steelhead are being picked up in Nahmint River, Cameron Lake and top of Little Qualicum River are providing fish fishermen with fun for fat, silver rainbows and browns. Upper Sprout River and lower Sprout Lake are giving up smallish cutthroats. There is some late sea-run cutthroat fishing at mouths of Englishman, Little Qualicum and Big Qualicum Rivers. Campbell and Sayward district Lakes have been only fair, with best fishermen catching the most.

Rangers Say Canucks No. 1 Farm Club

VANCOUVER (CP) — New York Rangers of the National Hockey League plan to switch their 1967 training camp to Western Canada, possibly Vancouver, Ranger general manager Muzz Patrick said yesterday.

The NHL club intends to work out with the Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, a club which Rangers and Vancouver businessman Fred Horne have purchased.

Patrick stopped here en route to San Francisco, where he was to meet Horne and later attend the annual meeting of the WHL.

"Normally we were delighted with the decision and you can say that Vancouver will be our main minor league interest from now on," Patrick said. "The Rangers training camp has been held in Eastern Canada in the past. Patrick said the club had been considering moving the main training camp out of the East for some time and the switch likely will come this year."

"We'll want the Canucks working out with the Rangers," he said. Rangers operated last year with Springfield Indians of the American League, Los Angeles Blades of the WHL and Kitchener of the Eastern Professional League as their primary minor affiliates. They supplied some players to the Canucks last year, too.

Patrick said here that the working agreement with Springfield has expired and that "we are not contemplating renewal." He said Los Angeles still will get seven players and a rookie if one is available from the Rangers but said it won't hurt the Vancouver interest. It was too early to say if Kitchener of the EPHL would bid.

Vote Against Resolution

Olympic Hockey for Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's Olympic hockey team will be named in August by officers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Delegates to the final session of the CAHA's annual meeting left the decision to their officers Thursday after rejecting President Jack Romburg's motion not to send a team to the 1964 games.

Romburg argued that because Canada pays an allowance to its players to compensate for salary losses, it violates the Olympic oath. He said the oath forbids players from taking any money.

He said Canada thus is winking its eye at the oath and setting a bad example to the country's youth.

Delegates from Thunder Bay, Ontario, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and Ottawa districts voted against his motion. Quebec and Ontario districts supported it while the Maritimes and Manitoba did not vote.

Bob LeBel, CAHA past-president and president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, said the International Olympic Committee has given the IIHF the authority to decide what countries are eligible to enter hockey teams.

And because the IIHF permits the payment of an allowance, Canada does not violate the Olympic oath when it sends teams.

LeBel suggested that because Trail Smoke Eaters are Allan Cup champions, the Olympics trip should be offered to them. Delegates have already approved Smoke's for the world hockey tournament in 1963, but LeBel said Trail might be willing to forgo this trip in favor of the Olympics.

Canadian Horseman To Try Derby Again

LONDON (CP) — Prince d'Amour, a longshot hope from France, will carry Canadian colors in the June 6 English Derby at Epsom.

The colt, formerly owned by Mrs. Suzy Volterra, passed a veterinary's test Wednesday and automatically became the property of Alberta Ranches, owned by Calgary multimillionaire Max Bell and Frank McIlhenny.

Prince d'Amour's Derby odds dropped from 25 to 1 to 20 to 1 at Wednesday night's callover of prices. The current favorite is Major Llamallic's Hetherell at 11 to 2.

One published report estimated that Alberta Ranches may have paid up to $30,000 for Prince d'Amour, a son of the distance-loving Tintinnus out of Prince's d'Amour.

Prince d'Amour will be ridden by the great Australian jockey, 48-year-old Scobie Breasley, and will be trained by Sir Gordon Richards, former champion jockey.

For years, Bell has fixed his sights on the Derby. His candidates have been Indian Hemp, Alberta Blue, Blue Bell and Alberta Pride. The best performance came from Alberta Blue, which finished sixth in 1966.

One British newspaper, the Daily Sketch, described Bell as "Canada's greatest racing apostle."

Tax-Grant Move Sparked by City

City council yesterday initiated a new attack on the problem of having the provincial government pay grants to the city in lieu of taxes.

Council approved a resolution to be sent to the Canadian

Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, asking all provincial governments to pay grants to cities.

The British Columbia government does not pay taxes on any of the property or buildings it owns in Victoria. City hall officials recently estimated these taxes would be worth some $300,000 to the city.

Previously, city officials have appealed directly to the B.C. government for grants in lieu of taxes, such as are given by the federal government.

Bennett Wires John D

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett wired Prime Minister Diefenbaker Thursday with a request that Vancouver's Second Narrows bridge come under the Trans-Canada Highway Agreement so tolls can be removed as soon as possible.

If included in the agreement, the $23,000,000 bridge would become eligible for a federal subsidy. It was opened two years ago.

The premier's appeal to the prime minister follows rejection of his proposal earlier Thursday by Works Minister Walker.

Mr. Walker, on his way to Vancouver Island, said: "The route has already been decided and has been completed."

'Presume Power Law Valid in Bond Deals'

VANCOUVER (CP)—A lawyer said Thursday British Columbia power legislation should be presumed valid in dealing with Premier Bennett's offer to redeem $40,000,000 in B.C. Electric debentures.

C. C. Locke, counsel for the Royal Trust Company—which is trustee for the $40,000,000 Series B debentures—said the act, as they stand, should be ruled legal until proven otherwise.

SEEMS OPINION

The company appeared before Mr. Justice J. G. A. Hutchison in supreme court seeking an opinion or direction on how it should proceed in view of the present supreme court dispute between the B.C. Power Corporation, the B.C.E., the attorney-general and the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority.

Premier Bennett has offered to call the Series B debentures for redemption June 15.

Salmon Jam River

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record 39,000,000 migrating salmon have come down the Fraser River this spring from Chilke Lake.

Fisheries officials say the number, an increase from 25,000,000 in 1962, is proof of the restoration of the valuable Chilke Lake run by the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission.

They said it means there should be a good catch when the fish return from the ocean in 1964.

However, a heavy mortality rate is expected as the fish enter salt water because of the low run-off on the river this year. Recent studies have shown that when there is a heavy run-off, the young salmon have a much higher survival rate as they adjust themselves to the change from fresh to salt water.

The restoration of the Chilke system is largely due to catch regulation and the cumulative effects of construction of fishways and removal of obstructions in the river.

Puffball Prize

Twins Judy and Sandra Haydock of Montreal were intrigued by this 10-pound puffball at the provincial museum. One foot in diameter and more than a yard in circumference, the huge fungus was found by L. L. and G. N. Field in their Happy Valley orchard. This type of puffball normally grows in mountains and seldom grows more than three inches in diameter. (Colonist photo.)

Dispute Closes Hillcrest Mill, 120 Jobless

DUNCAN — A five-month-old labor dispute at Hillcrest Lumber Company's logging operations yesterday brought closure of the firm's gang mill and the laying off of 40 men.

The idle mill crew brings to more than 120 the number of Hillcrest workers now without work.

Company officials say that without logs they will have to close down the entire plant by mid-June resulting in the laying off of a further 200 workers.

The dispute between the company and Local 180 of the International Woodworkers of America started Jan. 2 when the firm cut off a free bus route which ran between Duncan and Mesachie Lake 20 miles away. Free transportation was not covered in the master agreement and the company ended it as an economy measure.

Forty-eight loggers who used the bus refused to report for work at Mesachie Lake and they were joined by 22 others who prior to the dispute had provided their own transport.

NOT A STRIKE?

The union maintained the move was not a strike and the men continued to report for work at the bus departure points.

Earlier this month the B.C. Labor Relations Board issued a cease-and-desist order against

John D's Food Plan

Disposal By Export

REGINA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Thursday night the government is considering bilateral food disposal programs with Commonwealth countries, particularly the West Indies.

This was one of the main points he made in sketching future agricultural policy before a crowd of some 2,000 in the Regina armory.

Mr. Diefenbaker was speaking in Regina city riding where Conservative Ken More is locked in a struggle with New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas.

HADN'T ADVANCED

The prime minister said he didn't want to speak disrespectfully of his own province but Saskatchewan after 18 years of socialism, had not advanced as other provinces.

There was too much experimentation without experience, too much of going into business and then out of it.

Under Mr. Douglas the Saskatchewan government had established "pilot factory" which went into the red, a shoe factory which was soon down at the heels, a box factory which folded and a woolen factory which faded.

Mr. Diefenbaker said his government has reversed the downward trend in farm income.

FUTURE IN FARMING

"For the first time in a generation there is a future in farming and this future will grow brighter with the programs we have in mind."

The prime minister said that if it had not been for the extra federal assistance provided by Saskatchewan government by Ottawa it was doubtful whether the CCF government would have been able to carry on.

Mr. More said his campaign against Mr. Douglas "is no place of calm" but that he is not dismayed and likes the challenge.

Big Blast Rocks Port Alberni Park

PORT ALBERNI—Planks on the floor of the players' dugout in Recreation Park's grandstand were shattered by a mystery blast which shook houses for three blocks around between 10:30 and 11 p.m. Wednesday.

RCMP are investigating the incident, which apparently involved a regulation fuse and dynamite.

Sore 'Twist' Back? You're Just Not Fit!

VANCOUVER (CP) — If you get a sore back doing the twist, you're out of condition, man.

That's the diagnosis given Thursday by Professor H. D. Whittle, University of B.C. physical educationist, who claims the twist is good for you.

The professor told a meeting that "if people are in proper condition, the twist shouldn't bother them at all."

Aside from the new dance craze, Professor Whittle said that if people want to be physically fit there should be a lot of twisting, pulling, pushing, climbing, running, jumping and throwing in their daily lives.

Of today's children he said they needed more exercise. Otherwise they would grow up broad in the beam and weak in the back.

Inspection Of X-Rays Demanded

TORONTO (CP) — Compulsory registration and inspection of all X-ray machines in Canada was advocated in a private brief presented to the royal commission on health services Thursday by Dr. Charles Okun of Toronto.

"Many states in the United States have for years had legislation and inspection on this matter," he said.

Weekend to Aim for Crests

With another big weekend of fishing still to come in May, it will now take a 18.2-pound spring, any color salmon, a 7.11 river trout, a 4.6 lake trout or a 2.8 bass to win King Fisherman contest Prince Crests.

By the time the month ends and the first round for Prince Crests is closed, it will undoubtedly take a bigger fish in each category to qualify.

Each month 25 Prince Crests are awarded for the heaviest fish in each of the three salmon categories and for the 15 heaviest fish in each of the freshwater categories.

Prayers
Mark
'Day'

Commonwealth Day was celebrated with prayers by Canon George Biddle in a simple service attended by about 80 people at St. John's Anglican Church yesterday.

First of its kind in Victoria, the service was organized by the Royal Commonwealth Society.

Among those attending the service were Maj. Cuthbert Holmes and James A. A. George who founded the Victoria branch of the society in 1957.

After the service, Mr. George said the Commonwealth was the greatest force for good in the world today, outside the church.

It's a Grand Old Heritage

Selkirk Descendants Gather in City

Some 30 Victorians—all descendants of Lord Selkirk's mother, who first set foot in Canada 150 years ago—gathered in the city yesterday to mark the anniversary.

The original families, once the lifeblood of pioneer western Canadian agriculture, are now woven closely into virtually every facet of the nation's community life. They have prospered as the country has prospered.

The gathering, which was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Roy Sutherland, 2230 Rockland, was the result of years of patient research by a retired minister, Rev. J. G. Douglas.

Though the pioneers settled first in Kildonan, Manitoba, Lord Selkirk's followers had spread as far west as the B.C. interior within the first generation.

Mr. Douglas began tracing family trees shortly after he retired and moved to the city a few years ago. He's been turning up branches of the old families ever since.

His own interest is a family one. His mother's grandfather, John Pritchard, was Lord Selkirk's secretary.

Here is a list of the family representatives at the gathering:

Dr. and Mrs. Roy Sutherland, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sutherland, Alleen Gunn, Mrs. Alex Gunn, Mrs. C. Given, Mrs. Alex Pritchard, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Poper, Mrs. Hugh Corley, Mrs. H. G. Piddock, Mrs. Belle Picken, Mrs. June McMahon, Mrs. C. Stralicki, Mrs. Frances Smith, Cameron Smith, Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Gordon, Miss Ina Tait, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Harper, Nettie Palmer, Mrs. Marjory Jones, Mrs. Margaret Skirling and Mrs. Elizabeth Bird.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unwanted fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day, as needed, and follow the Home Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return this empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slimness. Note how quickly blood disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active. Adv.

Nine Buried In Clay Slide

BAIE COMEAU, Que. (CP)—Nine Gaspe woodmen engaged in the spring logging drive north of the St. Lawrence were trapped and killed Wednesday in a massive avalanche along the Toulouste River.

Seventeen men were driving logs 22 miles north of the Gaspe North Shore Paper Company mill here when a section of the bank 320 feet long and 40 feet high slid into the river. The river bed and some of the men were buried in tons of clay and sand. Only one body has been found Thursday.

THROWN ON TOP
The other eight men somehow were thrown on top of the moving earth. Three were in hospital here, still in a state of shock.

Company spokesmen said the tragedy might have been a result of dynamite explosions. The men were moving 300 cords of pulpwood stacked along the bank into the river.

Sometimes a stick or two of dynamite is used to loosen the frozen logs.

MADES COMMON
Woods division spokesmen added that such slides are common in this area. 225 miles northeast of Quebec City, though none has been known to take life.

The slide started about 1,000 feet back from the river bank. First news of the slide reached the mill here at 5:30 p.m. It took three more hours to get boats and a helicopter into the area.

WOUNDS RELEASED
The extent of the tragedy wasn't realized until Thursday, when the company released the names of the lost men. A company spokesman said the news was held back because some of the men came from the Gaspe area and among the 22, Louis and next-of-kin had to be notified.

Lengthy Trial

Theft Suspects Remanded After Wrap-Up

Two Vancouver men charged with the theft Jan. 15 of $21,000 from a safe at 528 Flagard were remanded to June 5 for judgment last night at the end of a full day's wrap-up of their trial.

Marion Miller and Francis Chan, together with Victorian Leonard Bell, earlier were charged with the offence. Bell went to the penitentiary for the burglary at the premises of Don Mee Company.

Chan and Miller, however, were released after a preliminary hearing, but new charges were laid against them. This time both elected trial by magistrate and appeared before Magistrate J. A. Byers.

Their trial opened earlier this week, and yesterday's session began at 10 a.m., continued through the afternoon, then resumed at 7:15 p.m. to conclude about 9 p.m.

Change Suggested

He said prosecutor Kenneth Murphy, court reporter Dennis Pearce and city detective Richard Berry had "suggested" he change his evidence.

The new evidence gave more detail about the movements of Chan, Miller and Leonard Bell on the night of Jan. 14-15.

The forgetful witness was William Bell, brother of Leonard Bell, who repeatedly said "I don't know" and "I don't remember" to the questions of Mr. Murphy about the events of Jan. 14 and 15.

Mr. Murphy won the right to have William Bell, a Crown witness, declared hostile and subjected to Crown cross-examination.

"I don't believe he is in fact suffering from amnesia," said Magistrate J. A. Byers, who pointed out: William Bell seemed to have a good memory for other matters and only declined to answer questions he found embarrassing.

Hostile Witness?

Opposing lawyers wrangled about whether William Bell should be declared a hostile witness, and about whether he should be made to read an earlier statement he had written out for police.

Mr. Murphy was allowed to read parts of the statement to Bell, including a passage in which he said, "Len. Frank and Mike (Leonard Bell, Chan and Miller) talked about a job they were going to pull," and another passage in which Bell quoted an unidentified voice as saying, "Let's load the stuff in the car so we can catch the 8:30 ferry from Nanaimo."

When Crown counsel asked whether this was a true statement, William Bell said, "I don't know."

Detectives told of finding $2,950 in $50 and $100 bills—some of which were identified as coming from Don Mee's—in Leonard Bell's coat at the Glen Lake cabin.

They also reported finding some $1,200 in silver in a suitcase in premises where Chan was found in Vancouver.

Ice Cream Van Gets Final Nod

In spite of spirited opposition by Ald. Lily Wilson, city council yesterday granted permission for an ice cream vending van to operate in the city.

Decision was made after a public hearing attended by some 20 people but opposed by none of them.

Only the spokesman for the vending van operators addressed council.

It was the first street vending permit issued for the city since 1947, when a bylaw was adopted prohibiting future permits.

Young Dancers Swirl

Part of a group of 250 square-dancing youngsters swirl on the lawn in front of the Empress Hotel. Children, ranging in age from eight to 15, are members of the Alma Square-Square Wheels dancing organizations. Several hundred interested spectators swelled the crowd to watch the performance, staged to mark Victoria's centenary.—(Ryan Bros. photo.)

68 Ocean Yachts To Jam Harbor

Sixty-eight ocean racing yachts decked with flags for preliminaries to the Swiftsure yachting classic this weekend are expected to be riding easily at berths in Victoria's Inner Harbor today. (See entry list on Page 27.)

Five of the smaller yachts will be taking part in the newly-instituted C class. Juan de Fuca Trophy race over a 75-mile course to Clallam Bay, Wash., and back.

Race officials said yesterday entries for the 136-mile Swiftsure top the all-time record of 62 boats set in 1961.

SATURDAY START Both races will start early Saturday—off Broughton Ledge and allowing for differences in speed, lead yachts in both contests should finish sometime before dark Sunday.

Four Victoria boats, including the RCN Pacific Command training yacht Oriole, and one from Maple Bay Yacht Club will compete in this year's Swiftsure.

HMCS Stettler, assigned as guard boat for the big race, will send off the Swiftsure fleet at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, with the smaller boats in the second race scheduled to go 15 minutes later.

ROLL CALL The official roll call by Humphry Gobye, begins at 6:45 p.m. and is followed at 8 p.m. by welcome to visiting yachtsmen from Mayor R. B. Wilson and Commodore R. H. Smith of Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

At 7:30 p.m. the Meistersingers will entertain the crowds with sea shanties and at 8:30 p.m. the navy puts on its first sunset ceremony of the year on the lawn in front of the legislative buildings.

REPORTS POSTED Throughout the two days of competition, up-to-date information on position and other details of the race will be available from the information centre in Eaton's store window, manned by RVYC officials.

Among the first-timers is the internationally famed 56-foot ketch Morning Star, a San Francisco entry and holder of several records in the tough Trans-Pacific race.

Skipper Ches Rickard of Vancouver will be back in Winsome III to defend the Swiftsure Trophy he won last year. Other prize-winners include Jay Jay skippered by Cmdr. J. A. Reed of Victoria, Maruffa and Diamond Head.

NEW ENTRIES New entries from Victoria are N. R. Ramsey's 43-foot sloop Norene of Wight and the 30-foot yawl Maxymum, skippered by Peter Young. A newcomer from Maple Bay is John Grievie's 34-foot sloop Barracouta.

Kukri, a 26-foot sloop, skippered by H. L. Lyne, is the only Victoria entry in the C class race.

At Closed Meeting

Top Secret Probe Set For City Reshuffle Tiff

Wyatt to Check Unrest in Ranks

By TED SHACKLEFORD

City council last night ordered a "top secret" investigation into rumblings and evidence of unrest in the city engineering department.

The action was taken at a closed meeting of council after the end of the regular council meeting.

City manager C. C. Wyatt was asked to check into the situation and report back.

CLOSED MEETING

The closed meeting was requested by Ald. A. W. Toome, who also asked for a report from Mr. Wyatt.

There was no mention at all of the behind-the-scenes unrest in the engineering department during the regular meeting of city council.

SUDDEN RESHUFFLE

Rumblings and grumblings preceded a sudden reshuffle of staff by city engineer James J. Garrett recently. Desks and offices were changed overnight.

Roderick Clark, formerly head of the city's planning and inspection division, was replaced by William Jorgenson, a sewer engineer. Mr. Clark was given planning duties and another office.

NEXT SHIFT

Next shift in the situation came when city traffic engineer Norman Worsley resigned his $700-a-month post at a moment's notice and without a public explanation.

And last Friday the Vancouver Island chapter of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia suggested in a letter to city council Mr. Clark should be reinstated to handle zoning and building inspection.

NOT ON AGENDA

Both Mr. Worsley's resignation and the architects' letter were expected to come before yesterday's meeting of council—they were addressed to council—but neither was on the agenda.

Instead, the architects' letter was referred by city clerk Frank Hunter to the public works committee, Mr. Garrett, and to Mr. Wyatt.

NO LETTER

The letter "disappeared" after it arrived at city hall Friday morning, but the Colonist obtained a copy of it through the local architects' chapter.

At that time the chapter president, Allan Hodgins, stressed the letter was sent without the knowledge of Mr. Clark and that Mr. Clark was not consulted in any way.

SENIOR STAFF

It is understood resignations of senior staff members must be considered by council.

It is possible that council will not consider and accept Mr. Worsley's resignation until after Mr. Wyatt's report.

City Rejects Removal Plea For Zoning

City council yesterday rejected a petition asking for the removal of zoning which permits construction of a funeral home on Fort Street, east of Cook Street.

Property owners in the 1100 blocks of Fort and Meares Streets had petitioned city council to remove the special zoning from two lots, 1147 and 1153 Fort Street.

Esquimalt to Pay For Own Home If City Says No

Esquimalt might have to build its own juvenile detention home if the municipal council refuses to accept a suggested part of the costs of operating a new Greater Victoria detention home, Mayor R. B. Wilson suggested yesterday.

He made the comment when city council was discussing cost sharing for the construction and operation of a new detention home.

ACCEPTED FORMULA Reeve Wurtelle accepted the proportion formula for construction costs but said he would not recommend to his council that operating costs be paid on the same basis.

At city council yesterday, aldermen voted to accept the intermunicipal committee's recommendation.

Health Board to Decide About Bad Liver Charge

The game of passing the meat buck went another round yesterday with Mayor R. B. Wilson announcing the metropolitan health board will decide whether to prosecute a city butcher who sold diseased beef liver.

"It's their responsibility," he said, following a report the health board planned to leave it up to city council.

When a seven-pound sample of abscess-riddled beef liver

was shown to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health recently, medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread announced no prosecution would be launched.

The following day he announced he would confer with city solicitor T. P. O'Grady over the possibility of prosecuting the butcher concerned.

After meeting with Dr. Whitbread, Mr. O'Grady prepared a legal opinion which he sent to Mayor R. B. Wilson.

'Blind Date' on Shelves Triumph for Local Man

Peter Bruton's NOTEBOOK

REPEAT PERFORMANCE: Local men in scenes from the Melfa River battle in Italy in 1944 shown on the CBC's television program Canada at War the other night, was John Windsor.

John couldn't see the program—he's blind as the result of being hit in the tank battle. His book dealing with his experiences since then—Blind Date—will be on city book-store shelves Monday.

The book represents a triumph, not only for John but for Gray Campbell as well. Gray is publishing the book locally.

SUGGESTION BOX: Colleague Jim Taylor didn't pause a second when asked what he thought the name of John Bassett's new professional Victoria hockey team should be. "Bassett Hounds," said Jim.

IDLE MOMENT QUERY: What are the first names of Mrs. Diefenbaker and Mrs. Pearson?

PARADE AT LAST: A vast number of people, it seems, thought the Queen Victoria who rode in Monday's parade was a wax dummy borrowed from the local museum. It wasn't at all. It was Mrs. Clare McCaul—who is as alive as you and I. ... Something similar occurred when a jeep passed through the streets with an RCASC major standing in the rear. "Daddy, he's in the wax museum," said one youngster. Come to think of it, he did look like Field Marshal Montgomery! ... A piece of glass fell off one of the ancient cars and shattered on the street. One of the spectators went out and carefully picked up every piece—to the cheers of the other spectators.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE: It seems ducks have an interesting life of travel. The Montana fish and game department reports a couple of ducks banded in the state recently turned up in different parts of Russia.

SIGN IN PASSING: Sign above the Individual Cleaners reads: "Vic Schools Symphony Christ Ch Cathedral."

MORE TELLIS: Teacher's note on a report card: "Alvin of integration, responsiveness and activity participation. Now if he'd only learn to read and write."

INSTANT ITEM: The orchestra conductor got there by facing the music!

LA TRIVIA: Old Victoria-style joke, circa 1962, heard yesterday from Cee Wright: "You ought to be on the stage." "Oh, really." "Yes, it leaves here in half an hour."

Finder of a wallet in the Hudson's Bay store last Saturday is asked to phone the woman to whom it has been returned at GR 7-5092. ... Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtelle may be stretching things a little too far when he claims there is no juvenile delinquency in Esquimalt, but you can say one thing for the municipality. Latest births and deaths figures released by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health show there are more births per 1,000 population and fewer deaths than any neighboring area.

Descendants of Victoria's first mayor, Thomas Harris, flank oil painting of their forebear. Left to right are Mrs. Robert Green, a great-granddaughter; Mrs. Conrad Schwengers, a granddaughter; Adair Green, great-great-grandson; Harold P. Wilson, grandson; and Mrs. John Campbell, great-granddaughter. Painting is in B.C. government archives.—(Robin Clarke photo.)

If Only Mayor Harris in 1862 Had 'Amalgamated' This Area!

If Mayor Thomas Harris house divided, we wouldn't have all the futurity of what we call amalgamation," Mr. Nesbitt said.

Mr. Nesbitt said a school or street should be named for Thomas Harris if this centennial year. He said Harris Green on Pandora Avenue and a memorial window to Mr. Harris in the Reformed Episcopal Church are the only mementoes of the first First Family of Victoria.

"If only Mr. Harris had done this, we wouldn't today be a grave of Mayor Harris in Ross Bay Cemetery and unveiled a marker to the first mayor's memory, presented by the historical association.

Present were several of the descendants of Mr. and Mrs. Harris—their grandsons, Harold P. Wilson and Clifford Wilson, their granddaughter, Mrs. C. P. Schwengers of Vancouver, their great-granddaughters, Mrs. John Campbell of Vancouver and Mrs. Robert F. G. Green, and their great-grandchildren, Joanne and Adair Green.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Readers: A young woman who signed herself "Feet On The Ground" wrote to ask if airline pilots cheat on their wives more than plumbers, or bus drivers. She said she was in love with a pilot and wanted to marry him but she'd heard so many stories about pilots running around with airline stewardesses and other women that she was having second thoughts.

I told her that cheating husbands can be found in every walk of life and while some occupations offer more opportunities than others, a man's faithfulness has little to do with the way he makes his living.

My reply produced an avalanche of beautiful bouquets and bitter invective — mostly from stewardesses, wives of pilots and ex-wives of pilots. The following will give you an idea what my week has been like.

From Chicago: Please tell "Feet On The Ground" to marry a man whose feet are also on the ground. I married a pilot. His monkeyshines were so bizarre and beyond belief I would not attempt to relate them.

The nature of my pilot-husband's work provided him with the most penetrable alibi in the world. He'd telephone me from "New York" to say there were mechanical difficulties and the crew would probably have to lay over. I'd call New York a few hours later in which I'd learn the plane had left — on schedule. That lying bastard had telephoned me from O'Hare Airport in Chicago which is 10 minutes from our house.

You seem to feel, Ann Landers, that pilots don't cheat any more than plumbers. Well, maybe you're right, but when a plumber has "mechanical difficulties" he still has to go home at night to sleep. — NO PARACHUTE

From Baltimore: You are so right. I married a pilot. He's my third husband (younger than I am, too) and the best of the lot. Husband Number One was a physician who drank himself to death. He had affairs with nurses, patients and even the wives of his colleagues. Husband Number Two was in the hotel business. I could always "get him at the hotel," he told me. The only trouble was I never knew in which room.

My present husband flies for one of the major airlines. He's as straight as an arrow and I've never been so relaxed and sure of a man as I

Bold Silks Catch Fire

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Boldly-printed silks offer colorful and exciting effects this season and have figuratively caught fire in leading Paris fashion houses. Capucci, Cardin, Yves St. Laurent and the school of young progressive designers have used up to 40 per cent of printed silks in their range of silks and silk derivatives this season.

SPECIAL CHARACTER — These new Paris prints have special character, vitally different from past seasons. Bold new abstract designs contrast sharply with last year's tender floral patterns.

Classic polka dots no longer step out in neat, prim rows, but are splashed like ink spots across light, contrasting backgrounds. Stripes and plaids no longer adhere to the straight and narrow path, but weave and break.

GEOMETRICAL FIGURES — Other printed patterns appear to be direct adaptations of abstract paintings seen in galleries near the Paris couture houses. There are rain streaks and splashes, dots and dashes and geometrical figures in a variety of colors.

Polka dots are not only placed irregularly but are also of different sizes and shapes. Most unusual versions are split in two, like the halves of a broken egg. Others affect spots and specks inspired by modern painting.

Gives Recipe For Borsch

Mrs. Graham Odgers who recently returned from a trip to Russia, told members of the Victoria Dietetic and Economic Association about the domestic side of life in Russia when she addressed them following a banquet at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Recipes and papers appeared when Mrs. Odgers gave a recipe for real Russian style borsch.

And this is the way she says that the average Russian makes it. Wash, peel and shred two large beets. Saute in butter for 10 minutes. Add 2 to 3 cups of vegetables stock in two parts. Season with salt and pepper and 2 teaspoons of vinegar. Cover and simmer for half an hour. Garnish with thin slices of smoked sausage or a tablespoon of sour cream. In summer the soup may be served cold.

Interest in cooking held top place at the meeting for in addition to Mrs. Odgers' comments, the Casserole Cook Book, recently compiled and published by the association was on display.

At the business meeting Mrs. Pat Brower was elected president; Miss Helen Campbell, vice-president; Mrs. Pat Mason, secretary; Mrs. Janet Horning, treasurer; Mrs. Betty Young, program convener; Mrs. Aubrey Gayford, social and Mrs. Helen Orr-Ewing, publicity.

One of the projects undertaken during the year was the compiling of a brief stating views of opposition to trading stamps. The association also went on record of not being in favor of the abolition of home economics course in Grade 7 after studying the Chant report.

B.C.M.E. Annual meeting of the Electrical and Mechanical Engineers Corp. will take place on Saturday, May 26 at 8 p.m. in the armories. There will be a social evening following the election of officers. Supper will be served.

Lay Off or Else Letter Threat

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal party counsel S. J. MacKinnon Thursday told the Ontario royal commission on crime that an anonymous letter has warned him to "lay off or else."

Mr. MacKinnon said that a friend received the letter this morning and telephoned him about it during the commission hearings.

The letter, put together with words clipped from publications, apparently threatened some persons whose names were not mentioned by the Liberal party lawyer.

Mr. MacKinnon said he considered he should publicize the matter immediately in order to "kill this sort of silly nonsense."

Mr. MacKinnon told reporters later that the letter, the text of which he received over the telephone from the recipient, included among those threatened Royce Frith, president of the Ontario Liberal Association.

Inspector Harold Graham, head of the provincial police criminal investigation branch who is attending the commission sessions, sent for the original of the document.

$10,000 'Fee' for MP Paid in Vain—Witness

OTTAWA (CP) — A Cornwall man testified Wednesday that he paid a member of Parliament $10,000 as a "fee" for the purchase of his property by the government six years ago but didn't learn until two years later that the payment was unnecessary.

He also said that two Montreal men, who had an interest in the property told him the "fee" had to be paid or the sale would not go through.

Abbe Bergeron, 45, was the chief witness at the opening of the corruption trial of Raymond Bruneau, former Liberal MP for Glengarry-Prescott.

The case continued Thursday. Bruneau has pleaded not guilty.

Miss Victoria, Synnove Petersen, and princesses Della Irwin and Muriel Bertrand begin their official out-of-town duties Saturday when they ride on the City of Victoria float in the Beltingham Blossom Festival.

Site for Y Chosen At Last

Agreement on the building site for the combined YM-YWCA has been reached between city officials and association directors.

The building, which will cost an estimated $1,000,000, will be erected on a six-lot site in the civic precinct at Courtney and Quadra.

In exchange for a landscaped strip on the Quadra side of the property, the city will donate an additional lot to the building site.

Plans for the building have not yet been completed, but it is believed it will be a multi-story structure of concrete and masonry and will contain a full range of facilities for both the men's and women's departments which include a swimming pool and residences.

The site will be landscaped to fit in with the overall plan for the eight-block precinct area.

Officials are hopeful construction will begin on the building next year.

After he was pulled from Atlantic, astronaut Scott Carpenter talks by phone aboard carrier to President Kennedy.

Capsule's Tilt Error Caused Overshoot

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter's Aurora 7 spacecraft overshot its intended target by 250 miles Thursday because it was about eight to 10 degrees off its planned altitude when the reverse rockets were fired to bring it out of orbit.

Instead of being tilted at a 34-degree angle to the horizon, it was inclined at between 24 and 28 degrees. As a result, the capsule followed a shallower re-entry angle and sped past its mark.

TRENDING SUCCESS

This was reported by Project Mercury operations director Walter Williams at a press conference following Carpenter's successful three-orbit flight. Despite this and a number of other things that went wrong during the flight, U.S. space officials hailed the flight and Carpenter's performance as a tremendous success and another milestone toward the landing of an American on the moon in this decade.

CAREFUL PLANNING

D. Brainerd Holmes of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, directing the mission, said: "The flight today was a successful earth orbital mission due to careful planning of the Mercury team." "We learned a great deal today," Holmes said, "and we will learn a lot more when we analyze the data. Early next year, we will attempt 15-orbit flights. Beyond that are the Gemini two- and four-man flights and Apollo earth orbit and moon-landing missions."

Project Mercury director Robert Gilruth said it was not certain whether another three-orbit mission will be planned like those of John Glenn and Carpenter. He said five and seven-orbit flights are under consideration but added that might be skipped in favor of jumping to the 15-orbit flights, which will provide an entire day of data on a man in space.

ALWAYS LOST

Concerning the communications failure at the end of the flight, Williams said: "We always lose communications for several minutes during re-entry because the tremendous heat prevents radio signals from penetrating to the capsule. Usually we are able to resume communications fairly quickly but we aren't sure yet just what happened today. It is possible Carpenter was just out of range of telemetry and by the time a plane got within range, Scott already was out of the capsule and therefore out of voice communication."

Although the balloon which Carpenter trailed behind the capsule failed to detach when a signal was given, it caused no trouble and burned up early during re-entry. Gilruth said it provided valuable information on man's color and depth perception in space.

Mess Kit'll Bring Acquittal

DEVIZES, England (AP) — A jury Thursday acquitted Capt. Nicholas Crespigny Laurence Vivian, 28, of drunken driving. He said he was not tight but his pants were.

The prosecution said Capt. Vivian, son and heir of Lord Vivian, fell while getting out of his light truck after leaving a party in servants' mess.

Not only that, said his defense lawyer, "but there was no one on the road."

Plane Hits Mountain

TOKYO (UPI) — A U.S. Air Force C-124 Globemaster transport plane crashed into the side of a mountain 35 miles northwest of Tokyo last night, killing all seven persons aboard.

Hula Blaze Damages Upheld for B.C. Girl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The United States Court of Appeals Thursday upheld a $125,000 damage award to a British Columbia girl who suffered severe burns when a hula skirt purchased in Honolulu caught fire at a hometown party.

A Honolulu federal district court jury had awarded the damages to Carol Lee Chapman of Kamloops. The skirt was bought by her aunt, Mrs. Frances Leppard of New Westminster in Hawaii in 1954.

Thousands At Gates

HONG KONG (AP) — Thousands of refugees from Communist China again tried to slip past British border guards and barbed wire barriers into Hong Kong Thursday despite growing efforts of Communist authorities to dissuade them.

Communist leaders appealed to the fugitives to return to their villages and help grow food. But border reporters said Chinese guards made no attempt to use force to stop the refugee flow, which has become an international political and humanitarian problem.

Heavy rain Thursday broke Hong Kong's spring drought but brought a new worry to British security forces.

Officials said the rains could bring the threat of epidemic to the crowded Fanling transit camp, where the refugees are kept before being sent back over the border to Communist China.

MAKE BIG MOUNTAIN

Border sources said British police and army patrols rounded up all but about 500 of 5,000 refugees who succeeded in getting into this overcrowded prison colony before dawn. They were sent to the detention camp for return to China.

In London, the foreign office said the Chinese Communists were re-imposing border controls in the area by bringing in more frontier guards and clearing the region of the refugees sent back by the trainload. A spokesman gave no indication, however, of how effective such measures were proving.

Pat Bay Plane Crash Kills Highway Officials

A. F. PROVENZANO

D. R. McLEOD

Two senior officials of the B.C. highways department were killed when an ancient twin-engine Anson aircraft crashed and burned at Patricia Bay airport yesterday.

Dead are D. R. McLeod, 44, of 2154 Windsor, assistant deputy minister of highways, and the highways department's district engineer, A. F. Provenzano, 1962 Bouchier.

They apparently died instantly when the departmental plane stalled on take-off at Patricia Bay at 3:11 p.m. and pinwheelled into the turf along side Runway 08.

Their aircraft, a reconditioned wartime Anson, exploded and burned on impact.

The bodies of both men were taken from the flaming wreckage by navy firemen seconds after the crash.

"They never knew what hit them. They seemed to be hardly touched by the flames," said one of the seven-man crash crew.

The crash took place less than 100 yards directly in front of the department of transport control tower at the airport.

The plane, reported to be on a trip to inspect a highway construction project in the Esquimalt district, had completed its take-off run.

Wheels Still Down

Eyewitnesses say the wheels were still down when the plane appeared to go into a stall turn.

The plane, which had about 20 to 30 feet of altitude, lost flying speed and spun into the turf between Runway 08 and a taxi strip immediately in front of the control tower.

The crash was witnessed by two control tower personnel. They were identified as F. Adams and Keith Hamilton.

A fireball burst from the crashed plane on impact.

One employee at the airport said the crash alarm was sounded even before the plane hit.

"Those fellows in the control tower must have been really on the ball," said the worker, driver of a fuel truck. "I saw the plane dip one wing then go in... and the alarm siren started at the same time."

A crash truck manned by three navy firemen was on the way to the scene even before the alarm sounded.

Moslems Slain Europeans Flee

ALGERS (Reuters) — At least 32 persons, 28 of them Moslems, were killed Thursday in acts of violence in Algeria, military officials said here early today.

The report came after another day during which Europeans lined up by the hundreds to flee the continued terrorism in the North African territory.

The dead included five Moslem women. Seventeen persons, 15 of them Moslems, were wounded by terrorists Thursday. Among the wounded Moslems were two women and two children.

A total of 1,440 persons, mostly Europeans, left by air today for France, the largest single exodus since the ceasefire agreement was signed in March. It took 15 planes to fly them to France.

Lightning Strikes Airman

ST. HUBERT, Que. (UPI)

Leading aviator A. G. Gagnon, 31, of Montmagny, Que., was killed instantly when struck by lightning during a heavy thunderstorm at Air Defence Command headquarters here yesterday.

At the same time, a freak storm, described as a "mini-tornado" struck metropolitan Montreal, destroying buildings and injuring occupants.

Forest Blaze Hits Nova Scotia Shore

HALIFAX (CP) — Firefighters Thursday night battled a serious blaze on Nova Scotia's south shore.

Details of the fire were few, but lands and forests department officials said the fire was burning over more than 50 acres of softwood near Woods Harbour, about 35 miles west of Shelburne.

Ironie Demonstration

"They did a marvelous job... they seemed to be there within 30 seconds," said airport manager A. J. Knowland.

Ironically, the navy crash team had just last week for Navy Day visitors to the airport. They had rescued a dummy from the "burning" wreckage of the same type of aircraft that figured in yesterday's tragic crash.

The firemen who went into the flames wore asbestos helmets and gloves, plus regulation firemen's boots and coats.

"We were too busy to feel the heat," said Mr. Fieldhouse. They had been standing by following the take-off of a T-33 jet. Another RCAF plane, a Viscount, was in the landing circuit when the Anson crashed.

The four-engine Viscount, carrying a pilot and a non-commissioned officer from Comox, was "waved off" by the tower.

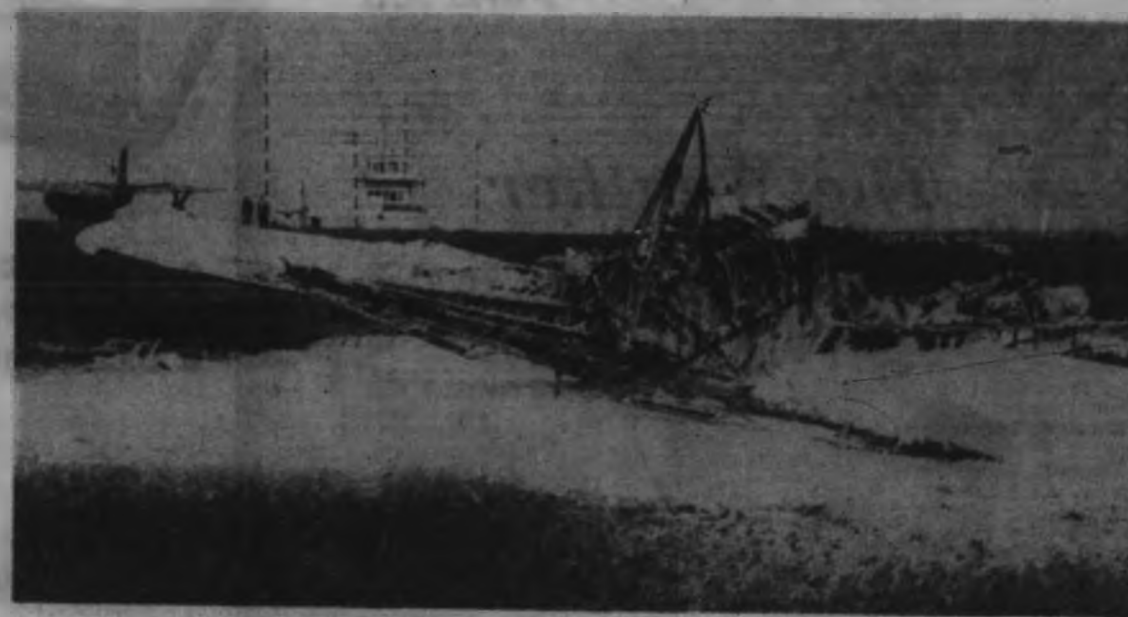

No passenger flights were scheduled at the time, but a number of people in the passenger terminal saw the column of smoke and flame burst from the crashed plane.

Several workers from Fairley Aviation had just left their hangar when they heard the crash alarm siren and saw the smoke billowing from the far side of the field.

"It was amazing how fast those firemen got there... it had just started when we could see the foam and CO2 start to cut into the fire," said one airframe worker.

The plane had taken off into

Salmon Jam River

VANCOUVER (CP)—A record 20,000,000 migrating salmon have come down the Fraser River this spring from Chilko Lake.

Fisheries officials say the number, an increase from 25,000,000 in 1962, is proof of the restoration of the valuable Chilko Lake run by the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission.

They said it means there should be a good catch when the fish return from the ocean in 1964.

However, a heavy mortality rate is expected as the fish enter salt water because of the low run-off on the river this year. Recent studies have shown that when there is a heavy run-off, the young salmon have a much higher survival rate as they adjust themselves to the change from fresh to salt water.

The restoration of the Chilko system is largely due to catch regulation and the cumulative effects of construction of fishways and removal of obstructions in the river.

Duncan Yacht to Race In Swiftsure Saturday

DUNCAN — For the first time a local yacht will take part in the Swiftsure Race this Saturday. The crew of the Barracuda II, including Jerry Joyce, Grant Butt, John Hutchinson and Jim Wilson of Vancouver, will be under the command of owner John Grieve.

Another Duncan man, Vic Palmer, will serve aboard the Vancouver vessel (and last year's winner) Winsome III during the race with skipper owner Chas Rickard and crewman Gordon Inglis from Victoria.

CHIMANINU — Supplying Indians with liquor cost Port Alberni man Jean La Plante $30 when he appeared in police court. A fine of $10 was levied against William Hyde of Duncan for driving without due care and attention.

DUNCAN — Nanaimo man George Darling was fined $10 in police court after he pleaded guilty to entering the Trans-Canada Highway from Somerset Road May 8 when it was unsafe to do so. Failing to yield the right of way to another car at the intersection of Jubilee and Fourth Streets cost Hugo Gurki $10. Both men were involved in minor accidents with damage estimated at $300 and $500 respectively.

NANAIMO — The city hall staff is burning the midnight oil these days getting out some 6,000 tax bills which should be in the mail by June 1. Tax-

Puffball Prize

Twins Judy and Sandra Haydock of Montreal were intrigued by this 10-pound puffball at the provincial museum. One foot in diameter and more than a yard in circumference, the huge fungus was found by L. L. and G. N. Field in their Happy Valley orchard. This type of puffball normally grows in mountains and seldom grows more than three inches in diameter. (Colonist photo.)

Sore 'Twist' Back? You're Just Not Fit!

VANCOUVER (CP) — If you get a sore back during the twist, you're out of condition, man. That's the diagnosis given Thursday by Professor H. D. Whittle, University of B.C. physical educationist, who claims the twist is good for you.

The professor told a meeting that "if people are in proper condition, the twist shouldn't bother them at all."

Aside from the new dance craze, Professor Whittle said that if people want to be physically fit there should be a lot of twisting, pulling, pushing, climbing, running, jumping and throwing in their daily lives. Of today's children he said they needed more exercise. Otherwise they would grow up broad in the beam and weak in the back.

Island

Fishing Guide Printed

PORT ALBERNI — Vancouver Island Sport Fishing Guide, a book prepared by men who know their subject, is off the press and could become best seller among western anglers.

The late Syd Richards was given credit for the idea of the guide with its map of Island fishing spots. He and Tom Jones of Alberni District Fish and Game Association gathered the information and Ted Barstow of the Nanaimo association compiled it for printing.

Mr. Richards, victim of a heart attack recently, did not live to see the book in print, but the first copy off the press was presented to his mother.

SPECIAL LISTED

The reader is informed of species in various lakes and rivers from Victoria to the north end of the Island and told how to get to any particular area.

The authors covered most of Vancouver Island during the past two years as they visited lakes, creeks and rivers, collected advertising and supervised the drawings.

Each club was responsible for supplying data for its own area.

One of the main values of the brochures is its up-to-date information on access roads and trails.

RAMPS GIVEN

Location of launching areas and ramps are described in the text.

Big Blast Rocks Port Alberni Park

PORT ALBERNI — Planks on the floor of the players' dugout in Recreation Park's grandstand were shattered by a mystery blast which shook houses for three blocks around between 10:30 and 11 p.m. Wednesday.

RCMP are investigating the incident, which apparently involved a regulation fuse and dynamite. The grandstand was not damaged beyond the shattering of the heavy planks, and no fire followed the blast.

A resident of Seventh Avenue at the entrance to the park reported that just before the explosion a car shot away from the area.

68 Ocean Yachts To Jam Harbor

Sixty-eight ocean racing yachts decked with flags for preliminaries to the Swiftsure yachting classic this weekend are expected to be riding easily at berths in Victoria's Inner Harbor today. (See entry list on Page 27.)

Five of the smaller yachts will be taking part in the newly-instituted C class Juan de Fuca Trophy race over a 75-mile course to Clallam Bay, Wash., and back.

Race officials said yesterday entries for the 136-mile Swiftsure top the all-time record of 62 boats set in 1961.

Both races will start early Saturday off Pointe Ledge and allowing for differences in speed, lead yachts in both contests should finish sometime before dark Sunday.

Four Victoria boats, including the RCN Pacific Command training yacht Oriole, and one from Maple Bay Yacht Club will compete in this year's Swiftsure.

HMCS Stettler, assigned as guard boat for the big race, will send off the Swiftsure fleet at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, with the smaller boats in the second race scheduled to go 15 minutes later.

ROLL CALL

The official roll call by Humphry Golby begins at 8:45 p.m. and is followed at 9 p.m. by welcome to visiting yachtsmen from Mayor R. B. Wilson and Commodore R. H. Smith of Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

At 7:30 p.m. the Masteringens will entertain the crowds with sea shanties and at 8:30 p.m. the navy puts on its first sunset ceremony of the year on the lawn in front of the legislative buildings.

REPORTS POSTED

Throughout the two days of competition, up-to-date information on position and other details of the race will be available from the information centre in Eaton's store window, manned by RVYC officials.

Among the first-timers is the internationally famed 56-foot ketch Morning Star, a San Francisco entry and holder of several records in the tough Trans-Pacific race.

Slipper Ches Rickard of Vancouver will be back in Swimsuit III to defend the Swiftsure Trophy he won last year. Other prize-winners include Jay Jay skippered by Cmdr. J. A. Reid of Victoria, Maruffin and Diamond Head.

NEW ENTRIES

New entries from Victoria are N. R. Ramsey's 43-foot sloop Norvne of Wight and the 36-foot yawl Maxymum, skippered by Peter Young. A newcomer from Maple Bay is John Grove's 34-foot sloop Baywatch.

Kukri, a 26-foot sloop, skippered by H. L. Lyne, is the only Victoria entry in the C class race.

At Closed Meeting

Top Secret Probe Set For City Reshuffle Tiff

Wyatt to Check Unrest in Ranks

By TED SHACKLEFORD

City council last night ordered a "top secret" investigation into rumblings and evidence of unrest in the city engineering department.

The action was taken at a closed meeting of council after the end of the regular council meeting.

City manager C. C. Wyatt was asked to check into the situation and report back.

CLOSED MEETING

The closed meeting was requested by Ald. A. W. Toome, who also asked for a report from Mr. Wyatt.

There was no mention at all of the behind-the-scenes unrest in the engineering department during the regular meeting of city council.

SUDDEN RESHUFFLE

Rumblings and grumblings preceded a sudden reshuffle of staff by city engineer James Garnett recently. Desks and offices were changed overnight.

Roderick Clark, formerly head of the city's planning and inspection division, was replaced by William Jorgenson, a sewer engineer. Mr. Clark was given planning duties and another office.

NEXT SHIFT

Next shift in the situation came when city traffic engineer Norman Worsley resigned his $700-a-month post at a moment's notice and without a public explanation.

And last Friday the Vancouver Island chapter of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia suggested in a letter to city council Mr. Clark should be reinstated to handle zoning and building inspection.

NOT ON AGENDA

Both Mr. Worsley's resignation and the architects' letter were expected to come before yesterday's meeting of council — they were addressed to council — but neither was on the agenda.

Instead, the architects' letter was referred by city clerk Frank Hunter to the public works committee. Mr. Garnett, and to Mr. Wyatt.

NO LETTER

The letter "disappeared" after it arrived at city hall Friday morning, but the Colonist obtained a copy of it through the local architects' chapter.

At that time the chapter president, Allan Hodgins, stressed the letter was sent without the knowledge of Mr. Clark and that Mr. Clark was not consulted in any way.

SENIOR STAFF

It is understood resignations of senior staff members must be considered by council.

It is possible that council will not consider and accept Mr. Worsley's resignation until after Mr. Wyatt's report.

City Rejects Removal Plea For Zoning

City council yesterday rejected a petition asking for the removal of zoning which permits construction of a funeral home on Port Street, east of Cook Street.

Property owners in the 1100 blocks of Port and Meares Streets had petitioned city council to remove the special zoning from two lots, 1147 and 1153 Fort Street.

Esquimalt to Pay For Own Home If City Says No

Esquimalt might have to build its own juvenile detention home if the municipal council refuses to accept a suggested part of the costs of operating a new Greater Victoria detention home.

Mayor R. B. Wilson suggested yesterday.

He made the comment when city council was discussing cost sharing for the construction and operation of a new detention home.

COSTS SHARED

Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee had suggested that both the cost of construction and operating costs each year should be shared on the same basis—42.265 per cent to be paid by Victoria, 33.28 per cent by Saanich, 14.282 per cent by Oak Bay and 9.183 per cent by Esquimalt.

At the intermunicipal meeting, Mayor Wilson clashed with Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtzle over the question of operating costs.

ACCEPTED FORMULA

Reeve Wurtzle accepted the proportion formula for construction costs but said he would not recommend to his council that operating costs be paid on the same basis.

At city council yesterday, aldermen voted to accept the intermunicipal committee's recommendation.

Health Board to Decide About Bad Liver Charge

The game of passing the meat buck went another round yesterday with Mayor R. B. Wilson announcing the metropolitan health board will decide whether to prosecute a city butcher who sold diseased beef liver.

"It's their responsibility," he said, following a report the health board planned to leave it up to city council.

When a seven-pound sample of abscess-riddled beef liver

was shown to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health recently, medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread announced no prosecution would be launched.

The following day he announced he would confer with city solicitor T. P. O'Grady over the possibility of prosecuting the butcher concerned.

After meeting with Dr. Whitbread, Mr. O'Grady prepared a legal opinion which he sent to Mayor R. B. Wilson.

'Blind Date' on Shelves Triumph for Local Man

Peter Bruton's NOTEBOOK

REPEAT PERFORMANCE:

Local man in scenes from the Melita River battle in Italy in 1944 shown on the CBC's television program Canada at War the other night was John Windsor.

John couldn't see the program—he's blind as the result of being hit in the tank battle.

His book dealing with his experiences since then—Blind Date—will be on city book-store shelves Monday.

The book represents a triumph, not only for John but for Gray Campbell as well. Gray is publishing the book locally.

SUGGESTION BOX:

Colleague Jim Taylor didn't pause a second when asked what he thought the name of John Bassett's new professional Victoria hockey team should be.

"Bassett Hounds," said Jim.

IDLE MOMENT QUERY:

What are the first names of Mrs. Dieffenbacher and Mrs. Pearson?

PARADE AT LAST: A vast number of people, it seems, thought the Queen Victoria who rode in Monday's parade was a wax dummy borrowed from the local museum.

It wasn't at all. It was Mrs. Clare McCand—she is as alive as you and I. ... Something similar occurred when a jeep passed through the streets with an RCASC major standing in the rear. "Daddy, he's in the wax museum," said one youngster. Come to think of it, he did look like Field Marshal Montgomery! ... A piece of glass fell off one of the INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE: It seems ducks have an interesting life of travel. The Montana fish and game department reports a couple of ducks headed in the state of Alaska recently turned up in different parts of Russia.

SEEN IN PASSING: Sign above the Individual Chambers reads: "Vic Schools Symphony, Christ Ch Cathedral."

MORE VIEWS: Teacher's note on a report-card: "Alvin egration, responsiveness and activity participation. Now if he'd only learn to read and write ..."

INSTANT ITSM: The orchestra conductor got there by facing the music!

LA TRIVIATA: Old Victoria-style jokes, circa 1962, heard yesterday from Cos Wright: "You ought to be on the stage. 'Oh, really.' 'Yes, it leaves here in half an hour.'"

... Finder of a wallet in the Hudson's Bay store last Saturday is asked to phone the woman to whom it has been returned at GR 7-3082.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtzle may be stretching things a little too far when he claims there is no juvenile delinquency in Esquimalt, but you can say one thing for the municipality. Latest births and deaths figures released by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health show there are more births per 1,000 population and fewer deaths than any neighboring area.

If Only Mayor Harris in 1862 Had 'Amalgamated' This Area!

If Mayor Thomas Harris could have foreseen in 1862 the growth of this area, he likely would have set the city boundaries east to the Oak Bay waterfront, west to the shores of Esquimalt harbor and north into Saanich as far as Royal Oak.

This theory was put by James K. Nesbitt to Victoria section, B.C. Historical Association, on "Thomas Harris night" last night.

"If only Mr. Harris had done this, we wouldn't today be a house divided, we wouldn't have all the utility of what we call amalgamation," Mr. Nesbitt said.

Mr. Nesbitt said a school or a street should be named for Thomas Harris in this centennial year. He said Harris Green on Pandora Avenue and a memorial window to Mr. Harris in the Reformed Episcopal Church are the only monuments of the first First Family of Victoria.

Mayor Richard B. Wilson yesterday placed a wreath on the grave of Mayor Harris in Ross Bay Cemetery and unveiled a marker in the first mayor's memory, presented by the historical association.

Present were several of the descendants of Mr. and Mrs. Harris—their grandsons, Harold P. Wilson and Clifford Wilson, their granddaughters, Mrs. C. P. Schwenger of Vancouver, Mrs. John Campbell of Vancouver and Mrs. Robert F. G. Green, and their great-grandchildren, Joanne and Adele Green.

Capsule's Tilt Error Caused Overshoot

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter's Aurora 7 spacecraft overshoot its intended target by 250 miles Thursday because it was about eight to 10 degrees off its planned attitude when the reverse rockets were fired to bring it out of orbit.

Instead of being tilted at a 34-degree angle to the horizon, it was inclined at between 24 and 26 degrees. As a result, the capsule followed a shallower re-entry angle and sped past its mark.

TRENDING SUCCESS

This was reported by Project Mercury operations director Walter Williams at a press conference following Carpenter's successful three-orbit flight.

Despite this and a number of other things that went wrong during the flight, U.S. space officials hailed the flight and Carpenter's performance as a tremendous success and another milestone toward the landing of an American on the moon in this decade.

CAREFUL PLANNING

D. Brainard Holmes of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, directing the mission, said, "The flight today was a successful earth orbital mission due to careful planning of the Mercury team."

"We learned a great deal today," Holmes said, "and we will learn a lot more when we analyze the data. Early next year, we will attempt 18-orbit flights. Beyond that are the Gemini two-man flights and Apollo earth orbit and moon-landing missions."

Project Mercury director Robert Gilruth said it was not certain whether another three-orbit mission will be planned like those of John Glenn and Carpenter. He said five and seven-orbit flights are under consideration but added these might be skipped in favor of jumping to the 18-orbit flights, which will provide an entire day of data on a man in space.

ALWAYS LOST

Concerning the communications failure at the end of the flight, Williams said:

"We always lost communications for several minutes during re-entry because the tremendous heat prevented radio signals from penetrating to the capsule. Usually we are able to resume communications fairly quickly but we aren't sure yet just what happened today. It is possible Carpenter was just out of range of telemetry and by the time a plane got within range, Scott already was out of the capsule and therefore out of voice communication."

Although the balloon which Carpenter trailed behind the capsule failed to detach when a signal was given, it caused no trouble and burned up early during re-entry. Gilruth said it provided valuable information on man's color and depth perception in space.

Mess Kit'll Bring Acquittal

DEVIZES, England (AP) — A jury Thursday acquitted Capt. Nicholas Crespien Laurence Vivian, 28, of charges driving his car while drunk and without a license.

Despite this and a number of other things that went wrong during the flight, U.S. space officials hailed the flight and Carpenter's performance as a tremendous success and another milestone toward the landing of an American on the moon in this decade.

Thousands At Gates

HONG KONG (AP) — Thousands of refugees from Communist China again tried to slip past British border guards and barbed wire barriers into Hong Kong Thursday despite growing efforts of Communist authorities to dissuade them.

Communist loudspeakers appealed to the fugitives to return to their villages and help grow food. But, border reporters said Chinese guards made no attempt to use force to stop the refugee flow, which has become an international political and humanitarian problem.

Heavy rain Thursday broke Hong Kong's spring drought but brought a new worry to British security forces.

Officials said the rains could bring the threat of epidemic to the crowded Peking transit camp, where the refugees are kept before being sent back over the border to Communist China.

Border sources said British police and army patrols rounded up all but about 500 of 5,000 refugees who succeeded in getting into this overcrowded crown colony before dawn. They were sent to the detention camp for return to China.

In London, the foreign office said the Chinese Communists were responding to border control in the area by bringing in more frontier guards and clearing the region of the refugees sent back by the traitors.

Labor 'Crucified' Under Socreds

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (CP) — A Montreal labor leader charged Thursday that the Social Credit government of British Columbia "has crucified the labor movement to the post."

That employers are able to use the province's labor laws to smash unions almost at will.

St. Brown, organization director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, told the union's convention that "some of the most vicious anti-labor legislation ever placed on the statute books" faced workers in many parts of Canada.

"Elsewhere in Canada, governments may be less crude, but the attitude is still one of hostility," Brown said. "Socialism, where a Democratic socialist government is in office, is the one outstanding exception. And, in the last two years, there have been hopeful signs of an improved atmosphere in Quebec."

Heroin Carriers 'Merely Pawns'

CALGARY (CP) — A lawyer said in Supreme Court Thursday his clients, charged with illegal possession of heroin, were "pawns in a much larger game being played in Vancouver."

Webster Macdonald made the remarks at the sentencing of Douglas Seignor, 40, to nine years, and Margaret Hall, 28, to three years. She also goes by the name Donna Denker. RCMP officers testified that 51 capsules of heroin were found in a parcel at the Calgary post office which was addressed to Donna Denker. Officers also found 100 capsules in a parcel which arrived at the post office in nearby Okotoks. It was also addressed to the woman.

Indians Demand Cash For Treaty Payments

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — Indians on three reservations near here, who were paid their annual treaty money by cheque this week, Thursday demanded future payments be made in cash. Residents of the Hunchilla, O'Chiese and Big Horn reserves insisted on cash payment despite assurances from Indian affairs representatives, who said the government cheques were as good as gold, silver or paper money.

Moslems Stain Europeans Flee

ALGIERS (Reuters) — At least 25 persons, 28 of them Moslems, were killed Thursday in acts of violence in Algeria, military officials said here early today.

The report came after another day during which Europeans lined up by the hundreds in the continued terrorism in the North African territory.

The dead included five Moslem women. Seventeen persons, 10 of them Moslems, were wounded by terrorists Thursday. Among the wounded, Moslems were two women and two children.

A total of 1,440 persons, mostly Europeans, left by air yesterday for France — the largest single exodus since the ceasefire agreement was signed in March. It took 16 planes to fly them to France.

Lightning Strikes Airman

ST. HUBERT, Que. (UPI) — Landing airman A. G. Giguere, 31, of Montmagny, Que., was killed instantly when struck by lightning during a heavy thunderstorm at Air Defence Command headquarters here yesterday.

At the same time, a freak storm, described as a "minor tornado" struck metropolitan Montreal, destroying buildings and injuring occupants.

Forest Blaze Hits Nova Scotia Shore

HALIFAX (CP) — Firefighters Thursday night battled a serious blaze on Nova Scotia's south shore.

Details of the fire were few, but lands and forests department officials said the fire was burning over more than 50 acres of softwood near Woods Harbour, about 38 miles west of Shelburne.

No homes were immediately threatened, but still firefighters were battling the fire.

Crews of firefighters were working to keep the fire from reaching power lines. Seven other fires were reported in the province during the day, but all were brought under control.

Two senior officials of the B.C. highways department were killed when an ancient twin-engine Anson aircraft crashed and burned at Patricia Bay airport yesterday.

Dead are D. R. McLeod, 44, of 2154 Windsor, assistant deputy minister of highways, and the highways department's district engineer, A. F. Provenzano, 1962 Bourchier.

They apparently died instantly when the departmental plane stalled on take-off at Patricia Bay at 3:11 p.m. and plowed into the turf along side Runway 08.

Their aircraft, a reconitioned wartime Anson, exploded and burned on impact. The bodies of both men were taken from the flaming wreck age by navy firemen seconds after the crash.

"They never knew what hit them. They seemed to be hardly touched by the flames," said one of the seven-man crash crew.

The crash took place less than 100 yards directly in front of the department of transport control tower at the airport.

The plane, reported to be on a trip to inspect a highway construction project in the Esquimalt district, had completed its takeoff run.

Wheels Still Down

Eyewitnesses say the wheels were still down when the plane appeared to go into a stall turn.

The plane, which had about 20 to 30 feet of altitude, lost flying speed and spun into the turf between Runway 08 and a taxi strip immediately in front of the control tower.

The crash was witnessed by two control tower personnel. They were identified as F. F. Adams and Keith Hamilton.

A thrust bus from the crashed plane on impact.

One employee at the airport said the crash alarm was sounded even before the plane hit.

"Those fellows in the control tower must have been really on the ball," said the worker, driver of a fuel truck. "I saw the plane dip one wing then go in... and the alarm siren started at the same time."

A crash truck manned by three navy firemen was on the way to the scene even before the alarm sounded.

Standby Crash Truck

George Fieldhouse, 2648, Blanshard, Barney Kent, 2821, Chuboro Bay Road, and Harry Minchin, 62 Sturdee, were manning a standby crash truck at the navy hangar when they saw the crash.

"We hit the throttle and took off," related Mr. Fieldhouse. "He was the first man to dash into the flaming wreckage to rescue the two occupants."

With his knife, he slashed through the safety belt of one of the two occupants and dragged the limp body out of the plane.

The fireman said the entire cabin of the plane was "laid open" by the impact, and they had no difficulty reaching the two occupants.

Meanwhile, three other crash trucks were manned and raced to the scene.

At the scene of the crash, while other members of the emergency crew laid a path of foam through the searing flames, Fieldhouse and Harry Minchin went back into the wreckage to bring out the second occupant.

Ironie Demonstration

"They did a marvelous job... they seemed to be there within 30 seconds," said airport manager A. J. Knowland.

Ironically, the navy crash team had put on a rescue display only last week for Navy Day visitors at the airport. They had rescued a dummy from the "burning" wreckage of the same type of aircraft that figured in yesterday's tragic crash.

The firemen who went into the flames wore asbestos helmets and gloves, plus regulation firemen's boots and coats.

"We were too busy to feel the heat," said Mr. Fieldhouse. They had been standing by following the takeoff of a T-33 jet. Another RCAF plane, a Viscount, was in the landing circuit when the Anson crashed.

The four-engined Viscount, carrying a pilot and a non-commissioned officer from Comox, was "waived off" by the tower.

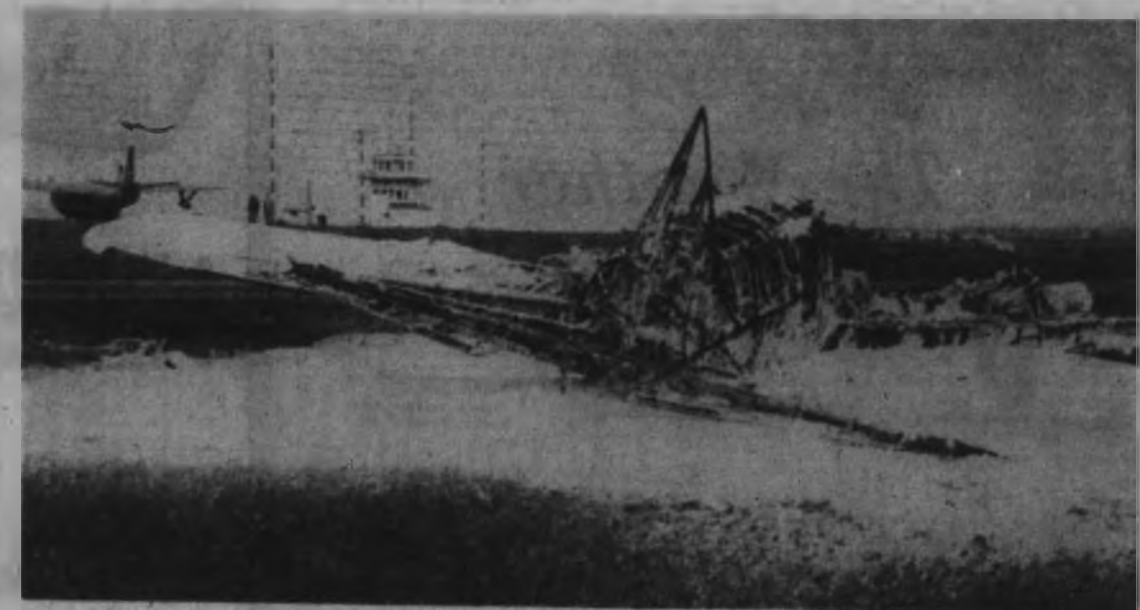

No passenger flights were scheduled at the time, but a number of people in the passenger terminal saw the column of smoke and flame burst from the crashed plane.

Several workers from Fairley Aviation had just left their hangar when they heard the crash alarm siren and saw the smoke billowing from the far side of the field.

"It was amazing how fast those firemen got there... it had just started when we could see the foam and CO2 start to cut into the fire," said one airframe worker.
